MAYOR HALL WILL SWEAR TO COMPLAINT TOMORROW.

CHARGED WITH FALSIFICATION

CITY IS KNOWN TO HAVE LOST $15,000 ON ONE DAM.

A CIVIL SUIT WILL FOLLOW

Contractors Will Figure in Litigation.—District Attorney Says Law in Matter Is Weak, the Offense Only Constituting a Misdemeanor.

Mayor H. C. Hall will tomorrow swear to a complaint in the district attorney's office, charging former City Engineer E. W. Case with failing to keep a correct and complete record of the water works, "and all things pertaining thereto," as provided by a city ordinance. A civil suit against both Case and the contracting firm of Clough and Anderson, which constructed the dams of reservoirs Nos. 4 and 5, on the mountain water system, will be instituted as soon as the weather permits an examination of reservoir No. 5, so that the amount of money overpaid by the city can be estimated. Approximately $15,000 was overpaid for material and labor on dam No. 4, according to estimates made by City Engineer R. H. Ashworth and Professor L. G. Carpenter, former state engineer, who have made an exhaustive examination of the specifications of the concrete core and puddling trench.

The above, in brief, composes the developments in the matter of the Case falsification of records, as exposed in The Gazette last fall. Mayor Hall brought the matter to the attention of the city council last night, asking instructions in the matter. On motion of Alderman Seldomridge the mayor was instructed to swear to a complaint against former Engineer Case, and Mayor Hall's remarks on the subject, including his suggestion that civil suit be started later, were ordered made a matter of record on the minute books, for use by the incoming city council.

Law Is Defective.

Mayor Hall submitted to the council a letter received by him yesterday from District Attorney C. C. Hamlin. The attorney points out the amazing fact that there is no statute in this state providing for the criminal prosecution, for malfeasance in office, of any city official. State and county officials only can be prosecuted against criminally. Mayor Hall endeavored to remedy this defect so that the present case could be prosecuted vigorously, and arranged with Representative O. E. Collins to have introduced during the last legislature an amendment to the statute providing for the criminal prosecution of city officials for malfeasance in office. Mr. Hall has not seen Mr. Collins since the legislature adjourned. Collins is out of the city, hence no explanation of his failure to secure the amendment is obtainable.

Following is the letter of District Attorney C. C. Hamlin to Mayor Hall, dated yesterday and submitted by the mayor to the council.

Hamlin's Letter to Mayor.

I have given full and careful consideration to the facts laid before me by yourself and the city engineer with relation to the charge that E. W. Case, when city engineer, made false estimates to the city council on which payment was made for certain work then being done on the water system of the city. I have also gone over the statutes with care for the purpose of ascertaining whether or not these facts, as stated to me, constitute a criminal offense under the laws of the state of Colorado.

It would appear that the actions of Mr. Case clearly constitute the offense of malfeasance in office, but, STRANGE AS IT MAY SEEM, THE OFFICERS WHO CAN BE PUNISHED FOR THIS OFFENSE ARE DESIGNATED BY OUR STATUTE, AND THE CITY ENGINEER IS NOT ONE OF THEM. I have also

SIGHT-SEEING AUTO IN WRECK

Machine Is Struck by Railway Engine and Several Women Badly Hurt—Several Arrests.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 13.—A sight-seeing automobile, containing eight or ten tourists, while returning from "The Hermitage," a few miles from Savannah, was struck by an engine hauling some cars at the crossing of the Central of Georgia railroad, and Bay street extension today.

Mrs. E. A. Hitchcock, of Burton, Ohio, aged 86, and her daughter, Miss Annie Hitchcock, were badly hurt. Mrs. Mary T. Rourke of Brooklyn, suffered severe injuries.

Helen McKinney, sister of Mrs. Rourke, was seated with the driver who pitched her on the fender of the engine and she was unhurt.

Lester Lukens, the chauffeur, and Charles Anderson, the lecturer on the car, and R. E. Walker, engineer of the train, W. E. Jackson, colored fireman, and George Hubert, the crossing watchman, were arrested. The police are searching for the flagman.

DICTATES TO LIQUOR MEN

State Supreme Court of Kansas Won't Let Brewers Move Out.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 13.—The state supreme court today granted the order requested by Attorney General Jackson to restrain agents of the general breweries and whisky concerns who have warehouses and maintain agencies in Kansas from removing their property from the state. The order also prohibits these concerns from transferring business in the state pending the hearing of the case. The application for the appointment of receivers for the liquor dealers' property in Kansas was set for hearing April 22.

INVINCIBLE IS LAUNCHED

The Second of England's Big Cruisers Is Completed.

NEWCASTLE, Eng., April 13.—The British armored cruiser Invincible, was launched this afternoon. She is one of the trio of largest cruisers in the world, of which the first, Indomitable, was launched March 16.

She is 530 feet long, has turbine engines and is expected to attain a speed of 25 knots an hour. The armament of each of these three cruisers includes eight 12-inch guns.

WILL NOT PAY FRANCHISE TAX

STREET CAR COMPANY HOLDS BACK ABOUT $55,000.

$15,000 IS DUE THIS CITY

El Paso County and School Fund Entitled to the Balance. Mayor Hall Expresses Himself Forcibly on Matter at City Council Meeting.

What about the $55,000 due the city, county and school fund in franchise taxes from the Colorado Springs and Interurban Street Railway company? Mayor Hall asked the city council this question last night and expressed himself forcibly on the matter.

"This corporation has no more right to withhold its franchise tax than has any other utility corporation, or any private taxpayer," said the mayor. "This city has a good share of the amount coming, and it ought to go ahead and get it."

City's Share About $15,000.

The mayor brought out the fact that since 1899 the railway company has paid no franchise tax. Its franchise is assessed at $200,000, and the total amount now due is approximately $55,000, of this sum the city's share is between $14,000 and $15,000, with $6,000 additional coming to the school fund. Mayor Hall reviewed the repeated efforts of the finance committee and himself, together with the board of county commissioners to bring the matter to an issue.

The commissioners, he says, suggested that the matter be compromised by reducing the tax from 1899 to 1902, and reducing the taxable value of the franchise from $200,000 to $100,000. Since the railway company is assessed on a total of only about $350,000, including its franchise, and the market value of the stock is known to be more than $750,000, $100,000 is not an excessive valuation for its franchise, said the mayor.

City Will Not Compromise.

"The company also disclaims all obligation for a franchise tax prior to 1902, because a franchise tax statute was passed in that year. It is contended, however, that a property tax has always been provided for, both as regards personal and real property, and that a franchise has always been regarded as property. A further compromise suggested by the county commissioners was to collect no penalty for back taxes, beyond an annual interest equivalent to the city and county warrants. The above compromise would result in a tax of only $4,000 to the city, instead of between $14,000 and $15,000, and, owing to the straw vote of the city, the compromises were rejected by its representatives.

The commissioners then announced that they would institute a friendly suit against the company to ascertain the exact amount due the city and county from the railway company, said Mayor Hall. After repeated attempts to learn what progress had been made, he was informed recently that the commissioners have decided to wait until the incoming council is seated, and to refer the matter to the newly-elected finance committee.

On motion of Alderman Hall, the mayor's remarks on the subject were made a matter of record on the minute books, so that the new administration can be readily informed as to the facts in the case.

STOCK INSPECTION BOARD

DENVER, April 13.—Governor Buchtel today announced the appointment of the new state board of stock inspection. Four of the old members were reappointed, A. N. Parrish of Lamar; E. B. Sylvester of Monte Vista; J. N. Pierce of Leadville, and L. K. Watkins of Denver. In addition five new members were appointed, as follows:

W. A. Johnson of Saguache; William Green, of Ludlow; J. K. Mullen, of Denver; John Welch of Wolcott, and Bruce G. Eaton of Greeley.

All of the men are representative stockmen of the state and will serve for a term of two years, beginning May 1.

STANDARD OIL FOUND GUILTY

COMPANY RECEIVED REBATES FROM C. & A.

LIABLE TO $29,260,000 FINE

ONLY 440 COUNTS OUT OF 1,903 DROPPED.

MOTION MADE FOR NEW TRIAL

No Action Will Be Taken Toward Collecting Fine Until It Is Known if the Verdict of the Jury Is Sustained.—Deliberation Was Short.

CHICAGO, April 13.—The Standard Oil company of Indiana, which has been on trial for the last six weeks before Judge K. M. Landis in the United States district court on a charge of having received rebates from the Chicago and Alton railroad on shipments of oil from Whiting, Ind., to East St. Louis, Ill., was found guilty on 1,463 counts out of the original 1,903 in the indictment. The remaining 440 counts were dropped from the indictment on account of errors.

If the verdict is sustained, the oil company is liable to a fine of $29,260,000 as the Elkins law, which the indictment charged the company with having violated, provides a fine of $1,000 to $20,000 for each offense. Pending a motion for a new trial, which John S. Miller, chief counsel for the defendant, announced would be made immediately, no action will be taken by the court toward collecting the fine.

The indictment charged that in the shipment of 1,903 cars of oil over the Chicago Terminal Transfer and the Chicago and Alton railways from Whiting, Ind., to East St. Louis, Ill., by way of Chappell, Ill., the oil company accepted a rate of six cents for 100 pounds when the published rate was 18 cents. Early in the trial, attorneys for the defense endeavored to have all the counts in the indictment thrown out on technicalities, but the court ordered that each count be considered separately, which was done.

Attorney's Efforts in Vain.

After a great deal of argument the counts in which errors were found were dropped. The defense then devoted its efforts toward proving that the company was unaware of the fact that the "special rate" had not been filed with the interstate commerce commission as provided by the Elkins law. Evidence was offered by the government showing that it was the duty of the company's officials to see that rates accepted by them were in the hands of the commission. Touching on this part of the evidence, Judge Landis, in his charge to the jury, said:

"The installment alleges that the defendant accepted a concession knowingly. To sustain this averment, the proofs need not establish that the defendant had actual knowledge of the lawful rate. It was the duty of the defendant diligently to endeavor in good faith to get from the Chicago and Alton Railway company the lawful rate by applying to one of the company's officers. In making this endeavor, the defendant is presumed to have known that the railway company would be guilty of a misdemeanor if it gave the defendant a rate on interstate traffic which was not set down on paper and a copy of the schedule filed with the interstate commerce commission."

Jury Reaches Verdict First Ballot.

In regard to the assertion by the defense that the Standard Oil company did not know of the existence of the tariff on which the indictment was based, Judge Landis said that the evidence submitted by the government went to show that there was a department in the Standard Oil company which dealt with oil in lots less than one carload and that it would have been absolutely necessary for the head of this department to be familiar with the tariff in question. The jury was out less than three hours and reached the verdict on the first ballot.

MANY NOTABLES WILL ATTEND

Endeavor Convention at Seattle Important Event.—Vice President Fairbanks Speaks.

BOSTON, April 13.—General Secretary Shaw of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, announces that Vice President Charles W. Fairbanks will address the twenty-third international Christian Endeavor convention, which will be in session in Seattle, July 10 to 15. The subject will be "Our Country, Its Problems and Possibilities."

There will be large representation of speakers from remote countries in Europe and the orient, among whom will be the Rev. John Pollock of Belfast, Ireland, president of the European Christian Endeavor union; George Nicholls, member of the British parliament; the Rev. Dr. Alex Francis of St. Petersburg; Rev. W. C. Marsh, of South Australia; Rev. W. J. Chamberlain of India; Rev. Alex Beattie of Canton, China; Dr. Samuel Sewemer of Arabia; Rev. J. M. Ibanez of Mexico, and T. Sawaya of Japan.

John Willis Baer, president of the Occidental college of Los Angeles; Rev. Dr. Smith Baker of Portland, Me., President Francis E. Clarke, Rev. Dr. Francis Lowden of New York, and many others will make addresses.

J. J. O'HARA NOW IN JAIL

Denver Promoter Surrendered by His Bondsmen.

DENVER, April 13.—John J. O'Hara, head of the Modern Securities and Investment company and the Gold Bond Investment company of this city, indicted recently by the federal grand jury on charges of using the mails to defraud in connection with the promotion of so-called mining enterprises which are alleged to be swindles, was surrendered to U. S. Marshall Dewitt C. Bailey by his bondsmen today and was placed in the Denver county jail.

WILL BE HARD FIGHT

VICTOR TO PUSH WATER CASE AGAINST SPRINGS.

Council Gathers Up Odds and Ends Preparatory to Stepping Out Tomorrow.

The city of Victor is getting ready to vigorously prosecute its water case against the city of Colorado Springs for rights on West Beaver creek, according to information received by the city council last night.

Several months ago Victor filed suit in the district court at Pueblo to restrain this city from using certain water flows along West Beaver creek, which composes the largest part of our mountain water system. This city filed a counter suit against Victor in the Pueblo district court. Both suits have lain dormant and were thought to have been dropped until word was received last night that Victor is preparing for a legal fight.

In the case of Pritchard et al. vs. the city of Colorado Springs, numerous ranchmen along West Beaver creek are also contesting the right of this city to use as much water as has been its custom in the past. The case has been pending for more than a year and has apparently been Odds and Ends.

Mayor Hall rounded up several odds and ends at last night's council meeting, it being the last before the advent of the incoming council.

Uncollected amounts due the city from former Building Inspector E. G. Geray, former Water Commissioner E. C. Davis and from the estate of Dolos Powell, former superintendent of the cemetery, together with $856 in impounding fees from former Chief of Police W. S. Reynolds, and $1,653.70 on the same account from former Chief of Police Vincent Kling, were all referred to the city attorney and finance committee, to be referred to similar officers of the incoming administration. To the same committee and official were referred $560 in accounts due the city from property owners for unpaid bills in sidewalk and gutter curbing along Huerfano street. Bills for similar work on other streets received the same disposition.

City Pays Palmer.

On motion of Alderman Hosman, the city auditor was authorized to draw a warrant for $1,000 in favor of General W. J. Palmer, in final payment of the city's share of the improvements on Dorchester park. On motion of Alderman Seldomridge, the city clerk was instructed to notify all property owners who have not complied with the sidewalk ordinance to do so at once, and to furnish a list of those delinquent property owners to the new council.

Chairman Seldomridge of the water committee submitted a deed from the Colorado Springs company, vacating certain alleys and parcels of land for the new water pipe line laid by the city from Yampa street to Prospect lake. The deed was received and recorded.

On motion of Alderman Hill, the council unanimously passed a resolution of thanks for the efficient aid rendered its members by all retiring officials of the present administration.

The council then adjourned until 8 o'clock tomorrow night, when it will convene and adjourn sine die, turning over the legislative department of the city government to the newly-elected council. President Holden and Aldermen Hill, Hosman and Abbe will remain members of the council, Aldermen Tucker, McCaffery, Seldomridge and Verner being succeeded by Aldermen-elect Fertig, John Hill, Kassen and Frost.

CHARGE IS WITHDRAWN

"STUFFING" ACT OF BARRETT ALLOWED TO PASS.

Managing Editor of Bulletin Makes Withdrawal That Ruef-Schmitz Prosecutions May Go On.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 13.—Responding to a letter from Fremont Older, managing editor of the Bulletin, withdrawing the charges brought by him, the grand jury today voted no true bill against John P. Barrett, news editor of the Examiner, and formally dropped the investigation which followed the alleged confession of Eddie Graney that, at a cost of $600, Barrett had hired him and James Coffroth to cause wholesale ballot box stuffing in the primaries of August, 1901. Mr. Older, in his letter to the grand jury, said that he withdrew his charges because their perusal at this time might hinder and hamper the Ruef-Schmitz and corporation prosecutions.

Asked whether today's action by the grand jury precluded that body from taking up the Barrett investigation at a later time, Assistant District Attorney Heney replied:

"There is no law to that effect."

The grand jury was in session one

MILLIONAIRES ARE ARRESTED

CHARGED WITH VIOLATING ANTI-LOTTERY LAW.

TWENTY-FOUR INDICTMENTS

CAPITALISTS IN ALL PARTS OF COUNTRY IMPLICATED.

$1,000 BAIL IS REQUIRED

Five of Indicted Men Are Estimated to Be Worth One Hundred Million Dollars.—Arrests Follow Night Conference in Office of U. S. Attorney.

MOBILE, Ala., April 13.—The United States grand jury here today issued 24 indictments for alleged conspiracy in violating the antilottery law. The following have been arrested and given bond:

Albert Baldwin, Sr., president of the New Orleans National bank; Chapman Hyams, capitalist; Frank T. Howard, receiver of the New Orleans water works; David Hennen Morris, Albert Hennen Morris, Edward Pennac Lewis C. Graham and Paul Conrad of New Orleans; Francis X. Kirkpatrick, Boston; James L. Shaw, Washington, D. C.; William P. Johnstone, formerly of Cincinnati, now of New Orleans, O. W. Bredow and James Rea, of New Orleans; Gen. William L. Cahell, Dallas, Tex.; E. J. Demarest, V. F. Demarest, and John M. Demarest of New Orleans; Robert K. Thompson, Mobile; William C. Henderson, Harris W. Henderson, formerly of Brooklyn, but now of New Orleans.

United States District Attorney W. H. Ambrecht declined to announce the identity of the others who had not been arrested. Five of the indicted men are estimated to be worth one hundred million dollars.

A conference was held in the office of United States District Attorney Ambrecht Friday night, lasting until 1 o'clock this morning, after which a number of the secret service men left for various parts of the country to watch those who were to be arrested. Three hours after the indictments were issued, the men were under arrest.

Francis X. Fitzpatrick of Boston pleaded guilty today and sentence will be passed May 27.

NEW ORLEANS, April 13.—Albert Baldwin, Sr., and Chapman Hyams appeared before United States Commissioner Chiapella today, pleaded not guilty, waived examination and were released on $1,000 bonds to appear before the court at Mobile.

Mr. Baldwin, speaking for himself Mr. Hyams, said:

Temperatures Below Twenty Degrees Are Recorded.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 13.—Reports received from all sections of the state indicate that the Kansas fruit crop was seriously damaged and in some sections completely destroyed by the heavy frost this morning. At some points temperatures below 20 degrees were recorded. The first alfalfa crop of the year also suffered as a result of the frost. It is stated that the cold weather has retarded the destruction of the wheat crop by the green bug in the southern part of the state.

BLAMED NEGRO TO SAVE SELF

Farmer Dealt With Roughly by Mob When Truth Is Learned.

HOUSTON, Tex., April 13.—While posses were scouring the woods tonight in the vicinity of Kirbyville, a small town near here, in an effort to apprehend a negro who, it was alleged by T. T. Tissue, a farmer, had criminally assaulted and shot his wife, the woman regained consciousness and denied the story. She would not state, however, who shot her. This caused suspicion to rest on the woman's husband, and an enraged mob took him. Officers prevailed on the citizens to surrender him and he was placed in jail.

BRYAN AT CHARLOTTESVILLE

Chief Speaker of Founders' Day at University of Virginia—Discusses Thomas Jefferson.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., April 13.—The chief event of Founders' day at the University of Virginia was the address of William J. Bryan. Mr. Bryan was greeted by a great audience in Cabell hall and spoke for nearly two hours. He discussed Thomas Jefferson and his political philosophy and incidentally put it in vivid contrast with Hamilton's. The vice in Hamilton's plans, he said, was lack of sympathy with the people. Jefferson for his day was a rich man but his money did not color his views of government nor destroy his sympathy with the common people. Mr. Bryan avoided all personal allusions. He referred to the California school case, he said, only to show that the Jeffersonian way of settling it would have been to leave it to the people of California. After his address Mr. Bryan was entertained by the Delta Chi fraternity, after which he left for Washington.

In the afternoon, Martin A. Knapp, of the interstate commerce commission discussed the transportation problem.

MAY DISCUSS RAILROADS

President May Explain His Attitude at Indianapolis Speech.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—There is a possibility that President Roosevelt will discuss the railroad question in one of the three speeches he is to deliver before going to Oyster Bay for the summer. He is to speak at Jamestown, at the unveiling of the Lawton monument at Indianapolis and before the students at the State Agricultural college at Lansing, Mich. On what particular occasion he will talk about the railroads has not been determined, but it will probably be at Indianapolis. At Jamestown he is to discuss historical affairs and at Lansing industrial matters.

ENGLISH LORD A THIEF

Found Guilty of Robbing Pawnbroker.—One Year in Jail.

LONDON, April 13.—At the Clerkenwell session today Lord William Neville was found guilty of the charge of robbing a pawnbroker and was sentenced to a year's imprisonment.

Lord Neville was sentenced to five years penal servitude in 1898 for fraud in connection with a promissory note, the prosecutor being Captain Spender-Clay, who, in 1904, married the daughter of William Waldorf Astor.

PARTIES HAVE NOT COALESCED

RAYNER GIVES HIS IDEA OF TRUE DEMOCRACY.

DISAGREES WITH W. J. BRYAN

Opposes Governmental Ownership of Railroads and Says Companies Alone Will Bring About Such a Condition—Jefferson Day Celebration.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Democratic societies and clubs in all parts of Greater New York tonight celebrated Jefferson day. The Democratic club held its annual banquet at the Waldorf Astoria; the Woman's Democratic club of the city met at the Hoffman house and the Independence league had as its guest W. R. Hearst and Attorney General Jackson.

The principal speakers at the Democratic club's banquet was Senator Rayner of Maryland. He responded to the toast "What should be the proper policy of the Democratic party and what is true Democracy?" He was listened to intently by several hundred guests. Senator Rayner said:

I do not accede to the view that the parties have coalesced. On the contrary, I believe that they are as widely apart as they have ever been. The president will not have a permanent tenure of office. One prediction can be safely made, and that is when the Republican party has another candidate, and it is bound to have one at some day or another, it will gradually drift away from a great many of his plans and purposes, and it will resume business at its old stand. Then it will be necessary for us to come back to our old principles, unless in the meantime we have so disfigured them that we will not be able to recognize them or to find them.

State Rights.

We are charged with advocating a doctrine of a state's right that would tend to nullify the powers of the federal government. This is an erroneous and unjust view of the situation. The doctrine of states' right now does not mean what it did a half century ago, for the simple reason that since that time the new amendments have been added to the constitution of the United States, and for the further reason that as the result of the Civil war and of the adjudications of the supreme court a great many of the rights that were considered as belonging to the states at that time have passed into the realms of federal jurisdiction. What we mean now by the rights of the state is that the federal government shall not legislate upon matters purely of local and domestic concern, and by unlawful construction interpolate such a power into the provisions of the constitution.

In the next place, we are opposed to governmental paternalism. I predict, with great respect to others who may differ with me, that the day will never come when the government of the United States will own and operate the railroads of the country. We do not want to own them. We own enough now. We had better sell some things we have than enlarge our holdings. I have studied the question of governmental ownership of railroads in other countries carefully, and my conclusion is that it is a failure from a political or commercial standpoint wherever it exists.

Opposes Governmental Ownership.

Of course, I may be mistaken, and everyone is entitled to his opinion; but I regard the governmental ownership of railroads as a vision and a phantom. Laying aside the legal difficulties that surround the subject, I can not look upon the scheme in this country as practical or feasible, nor do I believe that the Democratic platform will contain any provision holding out the hope of such an undertaking.

There is one proposition, however, that the Democratic party must contend for in this connection, and that is, it must demand a complete obedience to the existing statutes. The railroad presidents and officers of our trunk lines must be made, once and forever, to realize that they are the servants and not the masters of the people.

Governmental ownership will never come to pass unless they force the issue. They are the real agitators and I would kindly warn them to desist from pursuing the tricks and mysteries that have now been laid bare before the gaze of the American people.

There is another proposition that the Democratic party must maintain unless it has drifted away entirely from its anchorage, and this is that this is not an executive government; that the governmental distribution of power provided for in the constitution must be preserved, and that the president of the United States, to whatever party he may belong, must

SETTLEMENT NOW AT HAND

NICARAGUA AND SALVADOR TO ADJUST AFFAIRS.

WILL BE VICTORY FOR ZELAYA

PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT IN HONDURAS REPUBLIC.

PERMANENT PEACE POSSIBLE

Five Republics of Central America Have Under Consideration Conference to Be Held Either at Washington or Mexico City.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The navy department today received from Commander Doyle of the United States gunboat, Chicago, which is in Pacific waters off Central America, a dispatch relative to plans for a conference between President Zelaya of Nicaragua and Figuera of Salvador. As soon as the dispatch was deciphered it was sent to the state department and there followed a long conference between Assistant Secretary Bacon and Minister Corea of Nicaragua.

Information had been received previously from Phillip Brown, secretary of the United States legation at Guatemala, who has been negotiating between Nicaragua and Salvador, and who finally secured the consent of President Figueera to meet President Zelaya. This dispatch left rather a hasty impression as to the representation Honduras is to have at the conference. Commander Doyle made it clear that General Sierra, of the President Figuera, to meet President to be commandant of Amalpa.

Settlement Believed Possible.

The conference between Presidents Zelaya and Figuera will take place at Amalpa or on board a United States gunboat to be anchored at Amalpa. The fact that a Honduran general, who was not only a revolutionist, but one of the candidates of the revolutionists for the presidency against Bonilla, is to be in command at Amalpa during the conference, is regarded here as at least a partial recognition of the provisional government. If this proves true, a settlement of the dispute, it is believed, will be easily accomplished.

When the Doyle dispatch was sent, Amalpa had not yet completed its surrender. Commander Doyle estimated that it would require about four days to accomplish it. The Salvadorean troops in Amalpa, if had been agreed, should embark for La Union, Salvador, making with them all officers, private property and side arms.

President Bonilla had not yet reached the Chicago when Commander Doyle sent his dispatch, but it was stated that the president was expected that he would be taken to some port outside of Central America.

Arranging for Election.

President Zelaya advised that Bonilla be not permitted to land in Salvador for fear that he would organize a force against Nicaragua and continue the fighting. It was said further that arrangements are now being made for an election of a constitutional president in Honduras.

The dispatch received today from United States Counsel Philip Brown, at La Union, Honduras, states that a peace conference will be held at the port of Amalpa between Presidents Zelaya of Nicaragua and President Figuera of Salvador immediately upon the surrender of Amalpa, which is expected momentarily. The two presidents will meet in person and endeavor to reach a settlement of the difficulties which involved Nicaragua and Honduras in war and caused Salvador to become the ally of the latter.

The Nicaraguan president demands that the Salvadoreans recognize the provisional government which has been set up in Honduras.

This would mean the victory of President Zelaya, as the Honduran provisional government is made up almost wholly of Honduran revolutionists allied with Nicaraguan forces. The attitude of Salvador upon the subject of recognizing the provisional government is not known.

Peace Is Assured.

Mr. Brown's dispatch says that peace is assured by President Figuera having agreed to accept a proposi-

MATTER OF FIFTEEN MINUTES

Two Hundred and Fifty Miners Quit. Wanted to Enter Shaft on Company's Time.

PARK CITY, Utah, April 13.—Two hundred and fifty men at the Daly West mines refused to go to work today, and it is said that the men at the Silver King will follow suit Monday. The men quit, following a dispute involving 15 minutes of starting and quitting time. The company wanted the men to be at their places of work underground exactly at the start of the regular hour of the working day. This would compel them to report for duty at the mouth of the shaft at 6:45 o'clock every morning and stay until 3:15 in the afternoon. The men wanted to enter and leave the shaft on the company's time.

Ninety men at the Ontario mine walked out of the mine for the same reason a few days ago.

RELIABLE ADVERTISING.

There exists among advertisers that which is commonly termed an "Advertisers' License," which means that it is customary for the ad. man to inflate their figures or statements more or less. This practice has been in vogue so long that many feel justified in making statements that are absolutely untrue, in fact, the "Advertisers' License" is being worked overtime. We are very particular and carefully try to avoid the presence of this so-called License in any of our advertisements. Every bit of publicity we give to our merchandise is passing through the severest kind of scrutiny before it leaves our hands for the printer, and we are sure you have noticed that our offerings are fully up to our ads. We know that you do from the confidence with which you purchase. We are anxious to make our position clear to the readers of our ads that they must not underrate them in any way. They may not sound so enticing as some, but the values back of them will give the satisfaction for which we strive.

Gents' Furnishings

Our new lines of gent's half hose, four-in-hand ties and negligee shirts are all here. New ideas, new styles, and the right prices. Special showing this week. New weights in wool underwear.

Ready-to-Wear Section

So many excellent reasons why this department should offer you advantages greatly to be desired.

Ready-to Wear Bargains

daily, yours and such as we know you must appreciate. All we need to do is to get you in contact with them. It behooves us, therefore, to tell you about them in a way to awaken your desire, and we can best do so by telling you about these good things that are being picked up every day quite greedily by those that attend.

The woman who buys a suit between $15.00 and $50.00 does an injustice to herself if she fails to spend a quarter or half hour looking at THE SPRINGS STORE before definitely deciding.

This would apply to anything in the ready-to-wear goods. It's our desire that this should be a personal appeal to every reader of this paper interested in ready-to-wear apparel.

Suit Sale at $15.00

You that wouldn't ordinarily buy a suit at $15.00 would, without a doubt, pay $15.00 for a suit that looks like one at $25.00. It's made possible by watching opportunities in buying. We have more than 30 suits selected to go on sale Monday at this price and for which you will be asked $20.00 and $25.00 elsewhere, judging by their real value.

At $25.00

The models, styles and variety of texture at $25.00 we show is surprising. We are making the $25.00 suit a strong leader by putting in suits that should go in ranges of $30.00, $32.50. Many more new ones are taking places at the outgoing and you will find a change of suits, coats, waists, in fact, everything in ready-to-wear every week.

Millinery

The earliness of spring and continued beautiful weather have nearly tripled the demand on this department. Our making extravagant preparations on account of early Easter the demand far exceeded our anticipation, and we were rushed off our feet, and although we have been extending our workroom and its usefulness to its fullest capacity, imploring our eastern millinery connections for help in furnishing goods wanted on short notice, we have barely been able to keep pace with the growing demand. In consequence our hats are kept changing and up to the minute, as new creations are immediately replacing those that are sold.

Ladies' Underwear

With our usual care we have selected and prepared for spring and summer selling an excellent collection of ladies' and children's underwear, in union and separate garments, from the foremost and best makers. Values here represented are such as we feel will be hard to duplicate. We enumerate a few:

WILL APPLY FOR BAIL

THAW'S RELEASE WILL BE SOUGHT BY COUNSEL.

Application Will Be Fought by Jerome—Delmas Still Represents the Defense.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Setting at rest all rumors as to their present intentions, J. Russell Peabody, associated with Delphin M. Delmas, chief counsel for Harry K. Thaw, said today after a conference with the prisoner, that an application for Thaw's release on bail would be made. He declined to go into details regarding this action. There were various rumors that habeas corpus proceedings might be brought. The Thaw family stands ready to furnish bail in almost any amount.

District Attorney Jerome announced that he would make a strong fight against the granting of bail to Thaw and added that he intended to prosecute him for murder in the first degree, this latter assertion coming in reply to a suggestion that he had compromised with the defendant's counsel on a plea of insanity and would agree to send Thaw to Matteawan.

The next interesting development came when Mr. Peabody left Thaw after a late visit and said in reply to questions as to the stories that Thaw had changed his counsel:

"Mr. Thaw authorizes me to say that thus far he has made no change of counsel. You may say that as emphatically as you please. Of course we don't know what will happen next week."

"How does Thaw take the situation—?" the lawyer was asked.

"He is much distressed and feels badly about it," Mr. Peabody replied.

Asked as to the program for next week, he said:

"We have no fixed program. Monday we shall decide what is best to be done."

Mr. Delmas held a long conference with Thaw today and Mrs. Thaw saw her husband during visiting hours.

A somewhat sensational development was the publication of a letter said to have been written by Howard Nesbit, Evelyn Thaw's brother, explaining his position in the case and asking for money from Thaw.

Altogether Thaw spent a quiet day. The influx of mail at all deliveries, which has kept Thaw busy since he first went to a cell, was diminished somewhat today.

Mrs. Harry K. Thaw was somewhat wan and worn when she appeared at the Tombs today, but seemed in good spirits. Other members of the Thaw family remained at their hotel.

NEW YORK, April 13.—A letter written by Howard Nesbit, brother of Mrs. Evelyn Thaw, to Harry Thaw, was made public today. In it the young man wrote that when White was shot he thought it would be heroic to stand by "THE MAN WHOSE MEMORY TO ME WAS SO PRECIOUS." When District Attorney Jerome took his statement, Howard Nesbit wrote:

"I told him what Florence told me—or at least was supposed to have told me. I will put it more strongly and say she never told me anything against you that would tend to hurt you in any way. I did thinking it would help the man I thought was so good."

As to his subsequent attitude toward his sister and Thaw, he wrote:

"After Florence told her story on the stand, believe me, I was with her from that time on—heart and soul—I never intended to say one word against her if put on the stand—I would have forgotten everything I knew—I would have perjured myself out and out, if you wish to call it perjury.

"I am not afraid of Jerome. Another thing I wish you to bear in mind, and that is that I was influenced by artful and designing persons who urged me on to take the stand that I did.

"I love and cherish Florence as any brother should and it breaks my heart to think I cannot see her. I want to see her and tell her how sorry I am. She would listen to me, I am sure.

"I believe you were right and justified in doing what you did, and you are now in my estimation more than a hero. I look upon you now as a man fully sane and capable of holding your own in every crisis."

He declared that he wrote to Evelyn that he was sorry and asked her for $100 to pay debts he had contracted in New York, but he added "she seems to be somewhat bitter at me yet and will not see me. She answered that she did not have the money."

Perhaps he was wrong in coming to New York, but his parents were responsible for what he wrote adding that he is now true to Thaw's cause. He then appeals to Thaw for money which Evelyn did not send to him, and declares that he would rather kill himself than go to certain persons in the city for help, that he will not write home for money and at times has felt "like ending it all."

tion made for the meeting with President Zelaya. The proposition was made through Mr. Brown.

The state department has received the grateful appreciation of President Zelaya for the friendly attitude of the United States in behalf of peace in Central America. In return, the department has informed the presidents of Nicaragua and Salvador that the United States naval vessels in Central American waters will be placed at their disposal in helping them carry out the proposed conference. As Amalpa is situated on an island, the Chicago, Boston and Princeton will be of great service.

The Chicago is due to leave that vicinity soon for San Francisco, the Boston being her relief.

The differences between Nicaragua and Salvador are serious, but are not believed here to be beyond settlement.

Will Hold Conference.

Assistant Secretary Bacon today confirmed the report that representatives of the five Central American republics have under consideration the idea of a permanent peace conference to be held in Washington or Mexico City, to settle the many questions constantly arising. There have been many treaties between various ones of the republics but no agreement to which all of the five republics have been parties. It is believed here that the opportunity has arrived for a satisfactory broad agreement covering all of the issues and to which all of the republics would now become

FOR REDUCTION OF ARMAMENT

England Will Broach the Subject at The Hague Peace Conference. Little Interest.

LONDON, April 13.—The delegates who will represent Great Britain at The Hague conference have been selected and their names will be announced in a few days. Considering the prominent part Great Britain will take in the conference in view of her proposals for the reduction of armaments, there is little public interest shown here in the approaching meeting. This is largely due to the belief that the discussions will have no results as far as the mere subjects are concerned, owing to the decision of several governments to abstain from discussing subjects when they will not lead to useful results.

The same opinion is held to a certain extent in official circles here, but nevertheless the British delegates will broach reduction of armaments immediately after M. Nelidoff's opening address, in which the chief Russian delegates will explain the Russian program. Great Britain is taking this step not because of the belief that the powers will agree to reduce their armaments, but because she believes the discussion will have a good moral effect among the peoples of various countries. The British government does not understand why Germany should refuse to bring up the question, as, to nullify it, her delegates would simply have to vote against it.

Distinctive Clothes Built to Your Measure

We illustrate today our new two-button cutaway, with patch pockets, showing what clothes can be like if you buy them where clothes making is considered an art and not simply a trade. We appreciate your desire to be exclusive without being freakish and tailor little touches of distinctiveness into your suits that are noticeable and winning. For instance: the cut of the coat—its long rolling lapels, the clinging fit of the collar and shoulders, the lines of the back, suggesting the figure, and the treatment of the cuffs.

We have a variety of fabrics to select from.

We of today are constantly, almost hourly enjoined to b[illegible] doers and builders. But [illegible] where are true examples to be found. Who are the doers and builders—the Hills and the Morgans, who opened the great west to civilization and won for our country the commercial supremacy of the world, or the Roosevelts and the Bryans, who from the beginning of their manhood have divided their time between office holding and office seeking and [illegible] consider their [illegible] mission in life to be the regulators of the affairs of others.

[illegible] we are informed will much [illegible] that at last we have an honest president. But did we ever have a dishonest president? In a land where for more than 100 years no blot has stained the personal escutcheon of its chief magistrate, is there so great occasion for boasting now.

[illegible] the end we are told justifies the means [illegible] No matter what you do if your heart be true. [illegible] Horatio [illegible] the intentions and quick [illegible] with the [illegible] for it was the time [illegible] why ask what happened [illegible]

I have said over and over again that I recognize the great and wonderful re[illegible] the president, his command[illegible] ability, his intense and ardent pa[illegible] triotism, his [illegible] success of his [illegible] and his [illegible] popularity with the people, but the fear that possesses me is that some feeble [illegible] in either party who may have [illegible] ability and patriotism than he has [illegible] these fundamental distinctions [illegible] divert our institutions from the plans and purposes of their creation.

Outlines His Views

Senator Rayner then outlined his [illegible] on a D[illegible] platform.

I would make it brief and pertinent, he said. I would eliminate the customary and monotonous indictments against the opposition for crimes that they have never committed and I would admit all reference to the virtues that we propose to practice in the event of our success. I would give the country something a little new in the way of a Democratic decalogue. I would of course incorporate a plank for low tariff and fair commercial re[illegible] with the trading nations of the [illegible] I would then add a plank declaring that there is no such thing as an unwritten constitution of the United States and that if it requires a change it must be amended not by Secretary Root but by the suffrage of the people, and that it is a treasonable act to insert into it whether by judicial construction or otherwise any power or grant that is not confined within the well defined outlines and limitations of the instrument. In the [illegible] I would declare for the supremacy of the states and [illegible] yield the smallest portion of their sovereign rights over matters of local and domestic concern that lie clearly within their province and their jurisdiction. WHEN RUBBER GROWS HOT

From the Philadelphia Record.

When an automobile is running at high speed the rubber tires are rapidly warmed and the heat sometimes becomes very great with resultant injury to the rubber. The cause of this accumulation of heat in the tire is ascribed to the kneading of the rubber, which generates heat faster than it can be radiated away. For this reason manufacturers have found it to be an advantage to have metal parts in the tread such as the ends of rivets in contact with the tire because the metal being a good radiator helps to carry off the heat to the outer air.

VAN WERT TO SELL OUT

WILL DISPOSE OF JEWELRY STOCK IN THIS CITY.

Organizes Company to Handle Large Estate Which He Recently Inherited

The Kentucky and Virginia Realty company is the [illegible] new corporation by Charles A. Van Wert and associates to handle the vast coal and timber lands in Kentucky and Virginia to which Mr. Van Wert fell heir upon the death of his father last January.

The organization of the company under the laws of Kentucky is the latest chapter in the romantic history of Mr. Van Wert, who from the station of a citizen in ordinary circumstances was suddenly elevated to rank among the [illegible] of this city. The lands comprising the Van Wert estate include not less than 400,000 acres of the most valuable coal and timber lands of the south and [illegible] surveys recently completed indicate that all that is needed to realize many millions out of the property is development.

It is for this purpose that the new corporation has been organized and as soon as Mr. Van Wert can dispose of his business in Colorado Springs he will take up the work of carrying out the plans for the development of the estate, although he will still retain his residence in this city, which he says will always be home to him. He is now preparing to sell his stock of jewelry at auction and when this is accomplished he will leave for Louisville, Ky., with Judge James A. Orr, of this city, his attorney.

The main offices of the Kentucky and Virginia Realty company will be in Louisville, and associated with Mr. Van Wert are a couple of wealthy men of that city. The estate has been surveyed and will be divided into blocks of [illegible] acres each so as to systematize the work and enable the company to gain more detailed information on the value of the coal and mineral deposits on the estate. Part of the property may be leased or sold outright, but the company will take up the work of developing the resources of the land on its own account. Five mills will be erected beside power plants for furnishing electric power to the mills. A large portion of the timber consists of oak and black walnut and its valuation will run into the millions. A mill will also be erected for the manufacture of staves for wine casks, most of the material for which at the present time is imported from Germany.

The new company is formed with unlimited capital and Mr. Van Wert will hold 90 per cent of the stock. His auction sale of jewelry will begin next Thursday and the plans are to close out the stock by May 1.

CASINO TO OPEN EARLY

MANAGER BRINKER HERE TO MAKE ARRANGEMENTS.

Many Improvements Will Be Made at Popular Resort—Barnes Orchestra Engaged

The Broadmoor hotel and casino will open earlier than usual this season, according to W. G. Brinker, the popular manager, who is now at the Antlers hotel making preparations to have the hotel and grounds greatly improved for the coming season's business. Mr. Brinker is one of the best-known and most popular hotel men of Colorado and the success with which he was rewarded last year at Broadmoor has encouraged him to make greater efforts than ever before to cater to the public. The grounds and building will be completely renovated and greatly improved and the dining room will be more elegant than formerly.

Music will again be a feature at the casino and under the direction of M. O. Barnes, who was the director last year, the special concerts on Sunday afternoons and evenings will be more elaborate than ever. A special effort will be made to have the music for the dances in the evenings more attractive than last year, although this feature in the past has been one of the best.

Mr. Brinker was manager of the Adams hotel, Denver, during the winter.

JAMES YOUNG WILL LECTURE

Member of Faculty of New York School of Expression to Speak in This City

James Young, a member of the Annie Russell company, which is billed for the Opera house next Saturday night, has been engaged to deliver a lecture in the afternoon under the auspices of the Colorado Springs Federation of Women's clubs. The subject will be "A Defense of Shylock." The hour will be 4:30 p. m. and the place will be announced later.

Mr. Young is on the faculty of the New York School of Expression and is considered an authority on Shakespeare. His services are always in demand as a lecturer before colleges, schools and Women's clubs, and his presentation of his subject is both instructive and entertaining.

The members of the federation will be admitted upon showing their membership tickets and for others only a nominal fee will be asked. A special rate will be made for students in the college and schools of the city.

LONG TIME FOR SHORT HAUL

Two Weeks Required to Transfer Big Drill Compressor a Distance of Five Miles.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, April 13.—The Colorado Trading and Transfer company today, after two weeks' hard work with eight horses, succeeded in getting the 15-drill compressor, weighing 15 tons, for the Cripple Creek drainage tunnel to the Gatch Park site. The haul was only five miles long, but was over a new roadway, which made it decidedly difficult.

The new 175-horse power electric hoist is on the ground and the wire will be connected the coming week.

NEW DRY CLEANING PROCESS

Louis Stock of This City Among the First in America to Adopt System—Work Unexcelled

An invention recently patented, which promises to revolutionize the business of dry cleaning clothes, has been introduced for the first time into this city by Louis Stock, the veteran cleaning and dyeing man at 13 East Kiowa street. The process, which is technically known as the anhydrous ammonia-benzine dry cleaning process, has been introduced direct from Paris, France, where it was recently perfected and patented, and Mr. Stock is one of the first half dozen cleaners in America to adopt it.

So far superior is the new process to the old, both in the matter of convenience and safety to the user and in the results obtained, that it is hard to believe such an improvement possible. It is much more rapid and less expensive than the old process and its work is incomparable, as the finest fabrics are not in the least injured and no odor is left on the garments. The best of white fabrics retain their purity and soiled white furs are restored to their original shade. Mr. Stock has been in the business for 34 years and is delighted with his new process. For the coming week he has reduced his prices on skirts and jackets so as to show the public what his new process can accomplish.

PERSONAL MENTION

Mrs. Marie Burton left last night for a visit with her aunt in Kentucky.

Mrs. J. H. Thedinga has gone to Excelsior Springs, Mo., for a month or six weeks.

J. A. Smal of the firm of Harper & Small has returned from a business trip to Chicago and northwestern Illinois.

Mrs. J. M. Stires was called to Denver yesterday on account of the serious illness of her daughter, Miss A. S. Stires.

Mrs. Herbert G. Lang and her daughter Katherine have returned from Kansas City, Mo., where they have been visiting relatives and friends for two or three weeks.

Dr. Edward Praislin, formerly pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, has notified friends in Colorado Springs that he and his family will stop here for two or three days the latter part of this month on their way to California. They will leave Philadelphia on April 16 and will probably arrive in this city on the 19th.

fied myself that no prosecution can be sustained under these laws.

Section 2 of an ordinance of the city of Colorado Springs relating to the water works and the duties of the city engineer and superintendent of waterworks provides as follows

The Ordinance

"The city engineer shall make and keep a correct and complete record of the water works and all things pertaining thereto."

Section 2284 Third volume Mills Annotated Statutes provides as follows

Every person elected or appointed to any office or to any position of trust and employment under the laws of this state or under any ordinance of any municipality in this state who shall fail or neglect to perform the duties of his office as prescribed by the law or ordinance shall on conviction thereof upon indictment or information be fined in a sum not less than $10 nor more than $300 for each and every offense.

In my opinion this is the only crime stated in this statute under which a criminal prosecution might be maintained under the statement of facts as laid before me and you will observe that this statute makes the offense a misdemeanor only, punishable but by a fine

Very truly yours,
C HAMLIN

Mayor Hall reviewed the subject briefly, his remarks being made a matter of record He said

Mayor Hall Talks

"This matter ever since its discovery, has been the subject of close investigation by the city engineer many members of the council and the mayor It appears that the official records of the engineer's office during the incumbency of Mr Case were falsified to my knowledge in respect to certain material furnished and labor done on the dam of reservoir No 4 and that no true record was left by Mr Case or was to be found in that office regarding the actual dimensions of the concrete core of the core trench

"As to the puddling trench in that dam, it has been impossible to ascertain the actual facts, but from the information furnished by eyewitnesses while the work was progressing nothing like the material and work in that trench as reported by Mr Case had been furnished As regards the dam in reservoir No 5 nothing can be learned until the water is drawn from that reservoir

Dam Poorly Constructed

"The leakage of dams Nos 4 and 5 is apparently due in great part if not entirely to imperfect construction especially in the item of the concrete core Before the winter season precluded further investigation the city engineer and Professor Carpenter, in behalf of the city ascertained by actual measurement that in reservoir No 4 the concrete core is more than 20 feet short of the figures in Case's report and that at the following points the respective discrepancies exist

"At station No 2 depth of core in Case's report 13 67 feet actual measurements by Carpenter and Ashworth 5 7 feet at station No 5, Case's figures give a depth of 18 77 feet while measurements by the city engineer and Professor Carpenter show a depth of only 7 5 feet at station No 6 plus 75 feet Case's figures show a depth of 18 15 feet while actual measurements show only 6 2 feet at station No 7, plus 25 feet Case's records show a depth of 16 36 feet, while actual measurements show only 4 5 feet and at station No 8 plus 75 feet, Case's figures showing 14 28 feet are reduced by actual measurement to 5 4 feet

"The estimates made by Engineer Ashworth would show that this city has paid to contractors for the construction of this dam (No 4), estimated, certified and signed by Mr Case, something like $15 000 in excess of what the actual work was entitled to under the contract."

Council Authorizes Action.

Mayor Hall then asked for instructions as to whether he should proceed against Case in the only manner permitted under the peculiar wording of the statutes He was formally authorized to swear to a complaint against the former city engineer The mayor then suggested that later when the water is drawn from reservoir No 5 and the full extent of the overcharge paid by the city shall have been learned a civil suit for the amount shall be filed against both Case and the contracting firm This recommendation together with all of the mayor's address was recorded and will serve as a guide to the incoming council

During his speech Mayor Hall said that no actual proof can be secured that Case was implicated in the overcharge to the extent of receiving a portion of the money from the contractors

Does Not Deny It.

Mr Case has publicly confessed to falsifying the records He claims that he did it to prevent the contracting firm from filing a heavy damage suit against the city as a result of the city's refusal to pay charges for extra work not included in the original specifications Case claimed that his alteration of the specifications of dam No 4 made a difference of only about $3 000, but, as announced by Mayor Hall the discrepancy amounts to $15 000

The exposure which was made in The Gazette last fall created the biggest local sensation since the discovery of the defalcation of the then City Treasurer Moses T Hale several years ago

hour today and no testimony was taken Only two witnesses were in the ante-room—A B Cass president of the Home Telephone Company of Los Angeles and Fred Hilbert the latter of whom is under subpoena in connection with the charges of petty grafting by Mayor Schmitz Neither was called Cass stated to Heney that if placed on the stand he would in obedience to the advice of his counsel George A Knight refuse to answer questions on the ground that he might incriminate himself Heney said after adjournment

Mr Knight is quoted in the press as saying that he advised Cass Torrence and Adams to refuse to give any further testimony before the grand jury because of a published official statement that the grand jury had decided to indict them anyhow Mr Knight has been misinformed No such official statement has been given out It would be quite ridiculous for the prosecution to presume to say what the grand jury will or will not do in the matter of returning true bills

"The situation is simply this Under the statutes of California it is the duty of the grand jury to extend to an accused person the right to be heard in his own behalf when witnesses have given evidence against him which is incapable of explanation To illustrate If witnesses testified before the grand jury that they saw John Jones shoot a man to death that evidence would not be explainable and it would be improper to summon John Jones an indictment would be returned and Jones would in due time defend himself in court

But if witnesses testified that shortly before the murder they saw Jones in company with the deceased in the vicinity where the dead body was found that evidence would be explainable and it would be the duty of the grand jury to summon Jones and give him the privilege of explaining if he could

Given Chance to Explain

That is all the grand jury has done in the case of Cass Torrence and Adams—given them a chance to explain If they felt that they can not explain without incriminating themselves they undoubtedly know best

Cass Torrence and Adams already have testified before the inquisitorial body regarding the raising of large funds by the F[illegible] construction company's stockholders who besides themselves were Detweiler and Phillips But their testimony stopped before a sworn statement as to how this money had been disbursed Detweiler is now under 13 indictments charging him with bribing 13 supervisors in the sum of $500 each to award to the Home Telephone company a franchise competitive to that held by the Pacific States Telephone company He is a fugitive from justice and if arrested must furnish bonds in the sum of $130 000 or go to jail

The grand jury adjourned until Tuesday.

TOYS FROM ANCIENT DAYS

British Museum Has a Collection Going Back 1,000 Years

From the London Standard

A new departure has just been achieved in the Greco-Roman department at the museum by the installation of a colection of objects illustrating the home life and the training of children in Greece and the Roman empire as also of their colonies By its means one may range over 1 000 years of work and play in half an hour from early Hellas to the decline of Rome

The earliest Greek specimens comprise archaic dolls and toys the latter including an earthenware rattle roughly oval The skilled workers of Ephesus in a later age contribute dolls in alabaster and plaster with beautifully chased features The dolls house was evidently as popular in classic days as in the present for there are a number of models for its furnishing in bronze or glazed earthenware chairs stands and kitchens The circular disks or tokens engraved with runs heads fowls rats or flies and formerly supposed to have been vouchers for seats at the theatre or amphitheater are here in abundance These are now classed as counters for games and there are others in bone and crystal inscribed with Greek or Latin legends Knucklebones go back likewise to remote antiquity they are made of bronze or chalcedony and clever artificers with a comic vein shaped them in such forms as that of a satyr or a dwarf still preserving the old shape as far as practicable

The pastimes of children of a larger growth are suggested by those unveilings of Palamedes—dice These are made of ivory bone or close-grained wood show the same disposition of numbers as our own the points on opposite sides summing to seven Adjacent to these common descriptive article in the form of a twenty-sided model some three inches in length and evidently used in some games From Cologne come painters' palettes with a large cake of ultramarine pigment from Fayum a large portrait akin to those painted on mummy cases of the later period and two beautiful panels about 3x4 inches in dimension also six saucers containing various pigments

Literature and pedagogics are represented by various specimens of the ancient wax tablets and of wooden tablets prepared with wax for their employment pencil in place ink stands in earthenware and metal and alphabet, lists exercises on earthenware in one of which each consonant is followed in rotation by the vowels There is also an iron handled writing board inscribed with six lines from Homer also a papyrus written in Greek with a pen

LEADS AS A PAPER MAKER.

This Country the Greatest Producer, With Germany Following.

From the Chicago Chronicle

Consul William C Teichmann of Elberstock advises that the Revue Scientifique recently discussed the consumption of paper by the principal nations of the world as reflecting mod in progress of civilization In [illegible] its extensive use for printing purposes It places the United States in the front rank as the greatest paper producing country of the world with an annual output of 639 734 tons Germany follows with a production of 397 683 tons England 271 651 France 196 94 Austria 147 7[illegible] Italy 12[illegible]

One American corporation is declared to be the greatest paper manufacturing enterprise in the world possessing thirty nine factories with ninety six continuously running machines the company using almost as many machines as are operated in Italy and the Netherlands together and its annual production exceeds that of all the paper factories in Austria Hungary and almost equals that of all the British ones Its capital amounts to more than $ 10 000 000

While America leads in production Germany has become the largest exporter of this article with 51 000 tons annually England States 16 890 and France 13 000 The United Kingdom following with 49 210 the United States export goes to Canada and Australia Notwithstanding its large production England remains a good buyer having imported 14 770 tons last year

Regarding the direct consumption of paper it is an interesting fact that the United States leads with an annual figure of 36 pounds per capita England coming next with 31 3 Germany 2 [illegible] France 20 5 Austria 19 Italy 1 4 Servia showing the lowest European figure [illegible] India shows only 0 2 and China 11 per capita Nearly half of the paper manufactured in the world is used for printing purposes Twenty per cent is absorbed in the trades and industries Almost an equal proportion is applied for official and school purposes The remaining 10 per cent serves the demand for private us

RUSSIAN TEA NOW.

From the New York Press

Afternoon tea—what the French in faithful imitation still call le five o'clock—has been turned into a distinctive institution this winter by more than one hostess who conceived the happy thought of adding a touch of novelty to the ordinary dull routine of afternoon calls Everything is arranged and carried out strictly a la Russe A Russian atmosphere is made to predominate everywhere and the stranger who has traveled familiarly in St Petersburg or Moscow might fancy himself back in the domains of the czar when he drops in at one of these informal functions The rooms are Russian to the last detail For the service of the tea itself a genuine Russian samovar steaming as cheerily as when first used on the banks of the Volga holds the center of the table It is engraved in repousse design and instead of a spirit lamp burning bits of charcoal are brought in on the daintiest of brass shovels by a big footman dressed in the outlandish yellow uniforms that some of the Cossacks wear The tea table is of old carved ebony guiltless of cloth or doilies with big bowls full of ornamental bronze for cakes and fruit The tea is served in the most delicate egg-shell china with the usual fragment of lemon and just the [illegible] dash of specially imported vodka Conserved fruits and spiced cakes filled with nuts are the usual accompaniments of the beverage The whole room is furnished in Russian style with pictures framed in the beaten brasswork for which the Russian smiths are famous and brass bronze and enamel ornaments decorating stands and cabinets The best touch of all the room is kept in semi darkness with drawn shades and the most conspicuous light comes from a jeweled lantern burning in front of a real ikon

We sometimes think that a good many people really like a quarrel

INTENT TO KILL CHARGES

Man and Wife Charged With Same Offense.

The troubles of Robert Binks and his wife, Mary, formerly colored domestics in the employ of Dr. C. A. Holder, were transferred yesterday from the police court to that of Justice W. N. Ruby.

Chief of Police Alex Adams swore out a complaint in the justice court charging Mrs. Binks with assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill. Mrs. Binks swore out a similar warrant against her husband. Both will be given a hearing tomorrow.

Chief Adams' charge is based on the alleged action of the woman in slashing at her husband during their quarrel Friday afternoon. The woman claims her husband cut her with a butcher knife, showing a slight scratch on her arm as evidence.

Mrs. Binks told ... that her husband skipped a $1,500 bond in Fort Worth, Texas, where he had stabbed a man, and that the victim afterward died. The couple then went to Fort Smith, Ark., thence to Denver and finally came to this city, according to Mrs. Binks, to escape detectives. The sheriff's office telegraphed to Fort Worth, but received word that Binks is not wanted there.

MILITARY DRILL A HIT

May Be Made a Permanent Entertainment Feature.

Owing to the great success of the military spectacle, "A Day in Camp," presented at the Elks minstrel shows by the drilled corps under H. P. Barber, it has been suggested that the two companies be made permanent entertainment features of the Elks club. They are "Company Q, Three hundred and ninth infantry," and "Troop J, Twenty-third cavalry, colored," according to the program at the minstrel show.

The members of the corps spared no pains in preparing for the drill, and contributed much to the success of the entertainment. The members are: Colonel, H. P. Barber, commanding; Captain, Jim Thornton; Lieutenant, Wilbur Wiswall; Lieutenant, ...; Sergeant, W. G. Snyder; corporal, Ray Lowell; corporal, Sam Goshen, and privates, Ralph Bradfield, Sam Dean, A. E. Grimwood, Henry E. King, Charles Osborne, R. E. Zimmerman and Smith Barnes.

HAGERMAN MAY QUIT

Likely to Resign Governorship of New Mexico.

According to dispatches from Washington, D. C., Governor H. J. Hagerman of New Mexico, who is now in that city conferring with the president, is contemplating resigning the governorship and may go into the diplomatic service. It is said that the charge brought against him by his Republican enemies in New Mexico has disgusted the governor and that he is anxious to resign but that President Roosevelt is trying to persuade him to fight it out.

NEWS OF THE LOCAL COURTS

Alleging that her husband deserted her a month ago and that she recently received a letter from him dated at Los Angeles, saying that he will never return here, Mrs. Louisette L. Tainter yesterday filed suit in the district court for divorce from Wilbur M. Tainter. She asks that he provide for herself and two children, and also for a just division of his property, consisting of a $5,000 half-interest in the Colorado Springs Hide & Tallow company. The couple were married in Kansas in 1898.

Affidavits were filed in the district court yesterday by the opposing sides in the case of Flannagen vs. the board of county commissioners, in which a default judgment for the plaintiff was recently entered. Chairman J. P. Madden of the board filed an affidavit to the effect that summons served had been lost by becoming mixed with other papers, and that the commissioners did not intend to let the case go by default.

Flannagen's attorney filed a counter document to the effect that his client is 84 years old, that all the witnesses are aged men and that the delay incident to reopening the case will be a hardship to all interested in the plaintiff's side of the case.

T. A. Harding and E. M. Nelson, plaintiffs in the case against Allen and Mattie R. Burris, yesterday filed an amended complaint. The suit involves the disposition of 133,000 shares of stock in the El Paso Consolidated Gold Mining company. The plaintiffs seek to enjoin the defendants from disposing of the stock pending the settlement of the case.

No hearing was held in either division of the district court yesterday, but several important motions in pending cases were filed with the district clerk. A demurrer was filed by the Shurtloff Consolidated Mining company and also by John Nolan in the case of Isaac R. Cree vs. John Nolan, et al. A similar proceeding was filed by the plaintiff in the case of Hitchcock vs. Campbell.

A second amended complaint was filed in the district court yesterday by the plaintiff in the case of the Western Electrical company vs. C. D. Pickett, et al., a money demand for $1,565 and costs.

COLORADO CITY NEWS

Chief-of-Police Edward Rettiger arrested James Berry Friday night for terrifying a crowd of men who had gathered in the alley near his restaurant. Berry had been drinking heavily all day and had been persuaded to leave the Palace saloon by the chief. A few moments later he rushed into the alley brandishing a long butcher knife. Chief Rettiger ordered Berry to drop the knife, but he refused to do so and Rettiger knocked him down and took the knife away. Rettiger placed Berry under arrest and he will be tried tomorrow morning for disturbing the peace.

COACH J. D. KOEHLER,
Of the Denver University Track Team.

TO HAVE A FINE TRACK TEAM

Denver University Working Hard for State Intercollegiate Championship This Year.

The University of Denver will not have a baseball team this year, but is devoting a great deal of time and money to the development of a crack track team. Coach J. D. Koehler, formerly of the University of Nebraska, has charge of a large squad of track men and is determined to win the state championship this year. Koehler played both baseball and basketball at the Universities of Chicago and Nebraska, and was a star track man at Chicago. During his last year he was assistant to Coach Stagg. He has a fine squad of men to work with and will put out an excellent track team.

ATHLETICS AT BOULDER

Graduate Student Management Being Tried This Year.

The University of Colorado is employing the method of graduate student management and coaching this year. The method has been tried in several of the leading universities in the east with great success, and promises to be of the greatest advantage to the State university this year.

Warren F. Bleeker is graduate manager this year, and under his direction an excellent schedule of games has been arranged. From a financial standpoint the athletic affairs were never in a more promising condition. A new athletic field is being planned which will be completed in a short time.

TIGERS DEFEAT CUTLER

Pueblo Team Plays College Here Tomorrow.

The Colorado college Tigers defeated the Cutler academy baseball team yesterday afternoon by the score of 7 to 2. The game was exciting from beginning to end, and several grandstand plays were made. Hyder, the sub-pitcher for the Tigers, was in the box, as Ackley is being saved for tomorrow's game against the Pueblo Indians. Hyder was in perfect form and passed only three men, striking out eight. Graham pitched for Cutler and was in his usual fine form.

TIGERS VS. PUEBLO TOMORROW

Western League Team to Play Practice Game With Colorado College Nine.

Tomorrow afternoon the Colorado college Tigers will meet the Pueblo Indians on Washburn field. This is the first time that a Western league team has played in this city for three years, and a fine exhibition of ball is promised.

Ackley and Mitchell will be the battery for the college. Ackley is acknowledged to be the best college pitcher in the state, and will be in perfect trim for the game. The rest of the college team is in good form and will play a fast game of ball.

The following is the lineup of the teams:

Colorado College.		Pueblo.
Mitchell	c.	Smith or Le Brand
Ackley	p.	Shook, Gilbert
Travis	1 b.	McGillvray
Jackson	2 b.	Baer

SPORTING NOTES

CHICAGO, April 13.—Michigan university was today ruled out of western conference athletics because of its refusal to observe conference rules.

CHICAGO, April 13.—Fred Beel of Wisconsin easily defeated William Demetral of Chicago in a catch-as-catch-can wrestling match at the Chicago Athletic association club tonight.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

WASHINGTON, 4; NEW YORK, 4.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—The Washington and New York teams played desperately in the cold today without results, the game being called at the end of the tenth inning owing to darkness, with the score 4 to 4. Elberfeld was benched in the first inning for objecting too strongly to a third strike. Score:

											R.	H.	E.
N. Y.	0	0	1	1	0	2	0	0	0	0	4	7	[illegible]

PHILADELPHIA WINS FROM BOSTON

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—Philadelphia won the game from Boston in the third inning on Harbell's home run, with two men on the bases. Score:

Boston	1	0	1	0	0	0	0	0	0	2	7	2

ERRORS DUE TO COLD WEATHER.

ST. LOUIS, April 13.—Chicago defeated St. Louis this afternoon, 6 to 4, both Walsh and Jacobson being hit freely and given poor support. The weather was all but freezing, and this accounts in a large measure for the bunch of errors made. Home runs by Stone and Walsh were features. Score:

										R.	H.	E.
St. Louis	1	0	0	0	2	1	0	0	0	4	10	5
Chicago	0	0	0	0	2	1	0	2	1	6	10	3

LOSING WILD THROW.

DETROIT, April 13.—On an easy chance to retire the side in the sixth inning, Willett threw wide to first base, missing the third out. Cleveland then batted in four runs, taking a lead that decided the result. The game was played in a snowstorm, but to a good crowd. Score:

										R.	H.	E.
Cleveland	0	0	0	0	1	4	1	0	1	6	11	0

Willett, F. Jones and Payne; Hess and Bemis.

DENVER, April 13.—Dennis C. Murto, one of the most prominent real estate men and philanthropists of Denver, died this afternoon of necrosis of the liver. He was born in Ireland in 1842 and had lived here since 1892. He was a member of the Fourteenth general assembly. His wife and daughter, Mrs. H. W. Humphreys survive him.

WILL RE-ENTER ROWING RACES

Midshipmen Have Consent of Secretary Metcalf to Compete Once More With College Teams.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Secretary Metcalf has given his consent to the participation of a crew of midshipmen in the intercollegiate rowing races to take place at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 25. This will be the first time in many years that the middies have had an opportunity to match their strength and skill outside of their own waters, against the aquatic material of the great colleges and universities, and is in a way a return to the old traditions, when the naval academy sent forth the winning amateur crews of the country.

SPRINGS WINS IN WALK

Terrors Defeat Pueblo by a Decisive Score.

The Colorado Springs High school Terrors defeated the Pueblo Centennial baseball team at Pueblo yesterday by a score of 11 to 4. The game was walkaway for the Terrors. The score by innings:

Springs	3	2	0	0	2	0	0	4	0—11
Pueblo	2	0	0	1	0	0	1	0	0—4

ROME, April 13.—An effort is being made to obtain from the vatican the church of Santo Andrea Della Valle, which was begun in 1591, for uses as an American church. If the movement is successful it is proposed to have Archbishop Ireland preach the lenten course of sermons next year, and Bishop O'Gorman of Sioux Falls preach the lenten sermons of 1909.

The Complete Fishing Outfit $1

This excellent substantial Fisherman's Outfit would ordinarily cost you at retail $2.50 to $3.00. It is not a boy's outfit, as it may appear from the extremely low price of $1.00. The rod alone is worth at least double the price that we ask for the entire outfit. The rod is hexagon, three-jointed split bamboo, carefully glued, and finished with silk wrappings. Makes a splendid appearance and is one of the strongest three-jointed bamboo rods manufactured. Regulation cork handle, same as on high-priced rods. Rod is 8½ feet long, fitted with solid metal reel seat. Outfit also contains one good, substantial Anchor Brand reel, nickel clicked, single action, with riveted raised pillar, very strong, holding 25 yards of line. We also include 25 yards of No. 6 Braided Lisle Thread Line, best quality, one 1-yard Leader, ½-dozen Snelled Hooks, one box of split shot sinkers (2 doz.), and one bright Enameled Float.

This complete $3.00 outfit at our Special Price $1.00

SKIN DISEASES
HUMORS IN THE BLOOD

When the blood is pure and healthy the skin will be smooth and free from eruptions or disease; but when the blood becomes infected with some unhealthy humor the effect is shown by rashes, eruptions, boils and pimples, or some other annoying skin affection.

The skin is provided with countless pores and glands which act as a drainage system to rid the body of impurities which are constantly passing through these little tubes with the perspiration. There are also other glands that pour out an oily substance on the skin to keep it soft and flexible. When the blood becomes filled with humors and acids these are thrown off through the pores and glands, burning and irritating the skin and drying up the natural oils so that the cuticle cannot remain in a healthy condition.

These humors find their way into the blood through a disordered or deranged condition of the system. There is a certain amount of waste or refuse matter collected in the body every day. This is useless in nourishing or keeping the system in health, and nature intends that our eliminative organs shall remove it in the course of their daily duties. As long as these members perform their duty properly the blood remains pure and free from infection, but when from any cause they become dull or sluggish in their workings this refuse or waste matter is left to ferment and sour and be absorbed into the blood in the form of unhealthy humors.

The blood in its effort to rid itself of this foreign matter begins to throw off the humors and acids through the pores and glands of the skin. These coming in contact with the delicate tissues and fibres with which the skin is so abundantly supplied, produces irritation and inflammation on the surface and Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, Psoriasis or some other troublesome and disfiguring skin disease is the result.

I want to tell you of the great good I received from the use of S. S. S. I am now 75 years old and had suffered with Eczema for forty years, and could find nothing to cure me until I tried S. S. S. I suffered intensely with the itching and burning; pustules would form from which there flowed a sticky fluid, crusts would come on the skin and when scratched off the skin was left as raw as a piece of beef. I suffered agony in the long years I was afflicted; but when I used S. S. S. I found a perfect cure. There has never been any return of the trouble.
Stockham, Neb. C. H. EVANS.

I had a bad case of Eczema, it being especially severe on my right hand. I was hardly able to use my hand in my work. I tried a great many things in an effort to get relief, but was unable to do so until I read of S. S. S. and determined to give it a trial. I used several bottles of this remedy and it cured the trouble entirely. S. S. S. put my blood in fine condition and left my skin soft and smooth. Though this was several years ago there has been no return of the trouble.
CHAS. J. WOLF, Jr.
904 S. Second Street, St. Louis, Mo.

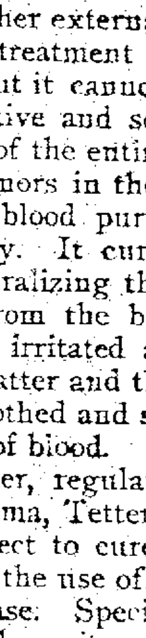

The treatment of Skin Diseases with salves, washes, lotions and other external applications is not in harmony with the character of the trouble. True such treatment relieves some of the itching and discomfort, and aids in keeping the skin clean, but it cannot reach the blood where the real trouble lies, and is, therefore, at best only palliative and soothing.

S.S.S.
PURELY VEGETABLE

A thorough cleansing of the entire circulation is the only cure for humors in the blood. S. S. S., the greatest of all blood purifiers, is the best and quickest remedy. It cures skin disease of every form by neutralizing the acids and removing the humors from the blood, so that the skin instead of being irritated and diseased by the exuding acrid matter and the sour, fiery humors, is nourished, soothed and softened by a cooling, healthy stream of blood. S. S. S. goes down to the very bottom of the trouble, expels all foreign matter, regulates the entire system, enriches and strengthens the blood, and thereby cures Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, Psoriasis and every other form of skin disease. Do not expect to cure a disease that has its origin in the blood with local applications alone, but begin the use of S. S. S. and when you have removed the real cause the skin will be free from disease. Special book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice desired will be sent free to all who write.

WAS IN MANY BLOODY FIGHTS

A. H. Weir Almost Last Survivor of the Famous Second Colorado Volunteers.

In the death of A. H. Weir, a pioneer resident of Colorado Springs, in Lincoln, Neb., last week, almost the last survivor of the famous Second Colorado Volunteers passed away. To them belongs much of the credit for Colorado's having been preserved to the Union.

Quantrell and his lieutenants had been doing pretty much as they pleased along the Kansas border until the Second Colorado came.

They would congregate, make a desperate dash, do some sudden deed of wholesale killing and disappear. Seeing in the night, like any other beast of prey, they mustered and raided while it was the darkest. Ordinarily they were never followed into the brush. [illegible] of pursuers stopped short at the timber line as though it were a line of unendurable fire.

Composed largely of plainsmen, miners, men of the frontier and old Indian warriors, the Coloradoans stopped at nothing. Whether by day or by night, "as they struck a trail they followed it to a funeral."

"Those fellows," Quantrell used to say over and over again, "will nothing ever stop them?" It was very hard to do. General Jo Shelby was the only man who ever did, and he had to give up about 500 of his very best men in less than an hour's fighting to do even that much.

It was near Newtonia, Newton county, Missouri—a place where was fought one of the quickest, hottest, bloodiest, little combats of the Civil war.

It was the last combat of the Price raid of 1864, and took place on a prairie almost as level as a sea. General Shelby was still covering the rear of Price's stricken column, as he had been day and night at Mine Creek. He fought, ran, turned about, fought again, ran some more, wheeled around again, still kept fighting, and finally saved everything left for him to save after Mine Creek.

Blunt was a grand soldier, a grand man in every way; took up the hunt where Pleasanton left off, and poured after the fleeing Confederates a devouring tide of horsemen, the Second Colorado leading. They had two or three squadrons of white horses, and wherever these were encountered the Confederates knew well always that the Second Colorado was to the front.

As General Jo Shelby took position in front of Blunt, he spoke to his advance, a picked body of soldiers, in curt, sententious phrase "Boys there are our old white horses again. It's the Second Colorado. It is going to be a stricken field for somebody. I can't fall back, and they won't."

After that the combat was a duel. The white horses went down fast, but so did a good many other horses, which were not white. Most generally, where the steed lay there also lay the rider.

No one, unless he has been a participant in a prairie fight between two bodies of veteran soldiers, knows how bloody and pitiless the most of them were.

No tree, no hillock, no sway of the ground, no shelter. It was a savage grapple out in the open, where all was done; he who held the field had nothing to exalt himself over him who surrendered it fighting.

Perhaps no two bodies of opposing soldiers had more respect for each other, than did General Jo Shelby's men and the Coloradoans. They fought each other desperately, but when the fighting was done which ever side held the field that side made merciful haste to look after the wounded. Since the war, whenever these two bodies meet there is always a love feast.

In Jackson county, where fully two regiments of Shelby's old soldiers used to reside, and there are living today many of Quantrell's most savage guerrillas, the name of the Second Colorado is a household word, and many is the story they tell to this day of the daring and prowess of the "Colorado boys."

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The senior class will celebrate Arbor Day next Friday by planting a vine. It is expected to raise the trellis at the same time, but if it is not put up then it will be before the class graduates. The spade which has been in the custody of the seniors during the last year will be turned over to the juniors to keep until next year. The committee in charge of the exercises is composed of Ray Henderson, chairman; Harry Rupp and Hazel Cameron.

The seniors elected their officers for class day last week. The class historian will be Louise Kampf; the poet, May Butler; the prophets, Vesta Tucker and Reuben Baxter. A committee, composed of Morris Andre, chairman; Lois Smith, Florence Younger, Abraham Pfeiffer and Blanche Whitaker will choose a motto and the flower.

At the monthly meeting of the Era society a farce entitled "Six Cups of Chocolate," was given by some of the girls.

The gateway which the seniors bought with the proceeds from their class play has been put up on the new athletic field and will be dedicated to the school sometime next week. A committee composed of Harry Rupp, chairman; James Stovell, Irma Hamilton, Hula Younger and Louise Auld will arrange for the event.

There was no prize drill this week but it is expected that one will be held by the battalion next Wednesday. Both companies have been practicing very hard and it is expected that the drill will be close. Company A won the last drill.

Mr. Need is still absent from school and there has been a substitute in his classes all week.

The senior English classes have finished the study of the early English novelists and have taken up Wordsworth, Shelley and Keats.

The next issue of the Lever will be devoted to the boys, and athletics and battalion work will receive especial attention. Merle Sebring will edit the paper, and Jay Randolph will manage it. All the departments will be in the hands of the boys as follows. Observatory, Abraham Pfeiffer; mirror, Ray Martin; battalion, Harry Rupp; athletics, Richard Morrison; alumni, James Stovell; exchanges, Richard Woolsey; Adelphi, Lloyd Shaw, and literary, Dwight Sipes.

The senior class will give a dance Friday evening at the Alamo. The invitation have already been issued. This will be the last dance that the present senior class will give. It is expected that it will be a great success.

DON'T WAIT TOO LONG.

At the first sign of Backache or pain in the region of the Kidneys, or weakness and Urinary trouble, the following simple prescription should be used.

Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Take a teaspoonful after each meal and at bedtime.

Any good prescription pharmacy will supply these three ingredients at small cost, which can easily be mixed by shaking well in a bottle. This is said to force the Kidneys to filter the sour acids and poisons from the blood, correcting the worst cases of Rheumatism.

WILL ASK FOR INJUNCTION

Mrs. Ogden Would Restrain Husband From Selling Property.

In the suit of Emma M. Ogden against her husband, Dr. W. C. Ogden, to recover title to $12,000 worth of real estate alleged to have been secured by him from her through coercion during her illness, the plaintiff yesterday filed notice in the district court that next Tuesday morning she will apply for a temporary writ of injunction restraining Dr. Ogden from mortgaging, selling or leasing the property. The real estate consists of lots Nos. 2, 30, 31 and 32 in block 500, North End addition of Colorado Springs.

FILES SUIT FOR A DIVORCE

Prominent Ranchman's Wife Asks for Separation.

Mrs. Jane Edwards filed suit in the district court yesterday for divorce from John R. Edwards, alleging cruelty. On request of the plaintiff, Judge J. W. Shafer issued an order restraining Edwards from disposing of $9,000 worth of property pending the settlement of the suit.

Mrs. Edwards claims that her husband abused their 13-year-old son merely to annoy her, and otherwise acted toward her in such a manner that she was obliged to seek another refuge, resulting in an attack of nervous prostration. She demands an equitable division of the property and suitable provision for herself and two children. The couple were married in this state fourteen years ago.

PUEBLO GETS SUNNY SLOPE HEREFORD SALE THIS YEAR.

For several years past, Mr. C. A. Stannard of the famous Sunny Slope farm at Emporia, Kansas, has been making a sale of his fine registered Herefords in Colorado and New Mexico. Two years ago the sale was held here and last year at La Junta. This year it will be held April 23 at the Pueblo stock yards, where fifty bulls and ten heifers will be sold.

This sale affords Colorado and New Mexico cattlemen an opportunity to buy some of the best bulls in the country without the expense of a trip east to buy them.

Anticipating your wants we purchased a large supply of go carts and buggies. These we are making decidedly low prices on for this week.

Yesterday afternoon the North End W. C. T. U. gave an interesting program at the home of Mrs. James W. Atkinson, 2020 North Tejon street. Mrs. Harlan, superintendent of the health and heredity department, had charge of the program.

A debate, "Resolved, That heredity has greater influence upon character than environment," was participated in by Mrs. Richard Aitken and Mrs. Dr. Alberta Yale for the affirmative, and Mrs. C. L. Aldrich and Mrs. A. H. Loomis for the negative. An interesting discussion of the subject followed. Those who took part were the Mesdames Mowry, Harbaugh, Campbell, Crowley, McClure and Whitney. The musical part of the program was of unusual excellence. Miss Ruth Law and Miss Vera Atkinson each rendered piano solos and Miss Mabel Harlan played a violin solo. Miss Irma Case pleased all with a reading.

The hostess served delicious refreshments during a social hour.

The members of the Colorado Springs Musical club will hold a recital in Perkins hall tomorrow evening at 8:15 o'clock. The following program will be given:

The choir of the A. M. E. church will give a cantata under the auspices of the Colorado Springs C. A. Report next Tuesday evening. The cantata will be one of the best given in Colorado Springs this year and all are invited to attend.

A benefit tea will be given for the Garfield Kindergarten association next Thursday afternoon from 2:30 to 5 o'clock, in the kindergarten room in the Garfield school building. There will be recitations by Mrs. Fleming and instrumental selections by the Misses West. All friends of the association are cordially urged to attend.

The members of the East Side Women's Christian Temperance union have decided to furnish a room in the new deaconess hospital, so the proceeds from a series of Demorest medal contests will be set aside for that purpose.

Next Friday night, a silver medal contest will be participated in by a number of young ladies, some of them teachers in the schools. Good music and recitations will be rendered while the judges of the contest are deliberating.

There will also be contests by girls about fifteen years old, for which no time has been set, about three weeks apart; contests by eleven-year-old girls in May, and in June a gold medal contest will be participated in by boys who have won the silver medal; also one for the silver medal by a class of boys to make recruits for the gold medal. A gold medal contest is being planned for July by young ladies; a matron's silver medal contest and a grand gold medal contest in August, open to anyone who holds a gold medal.

The Jubal-Wall company No. 2, D. O. K. K., will hold ceremonial sessions in the K. P. hall April 24. All members are requested to be present.

A SHIRT WAIST DANCE

Kappa Sigma Fraternity Gives Party at Kinnikinnick.

A unique social event was the shirt waist dance given by the Kappa Sigma fraternity at the Kinnikinnick last night. The young men appeared attired in crisp white shirt waists, sans coat and sans vest, much to the surprise of their young women guests. This cool garb, however, was particularly fitting for dancing, and added not a little to the pleasure and unconventionality of the gathering. The hall was prettily adorned with Japanese lanterns and other decorations.

CITY BRIEFS.

BROOKS TO SPEAK—Hon. Franklin E. Brooks will address the meeting of the Pike's Peak polytechnic society in Perkins hall April 27. He will lecture on the subject, "Panama and the Panama Canal." All who are interested are invited.

WILL VISIT PUEBLO—About 25 members of the Colorado Springs Knights of Columbus will go to Pueblo today to assist in initiation exercises there this afternoon and participate in a banquet in the evening. Arrangements are being made by the Knights of Colorado Springs, Denver, Pueblo, Cripple Creek, Canon City and other towns on the eastern slope for a joint picnic to be held in July.

LEAVE FOR NEVADA—Frank Allen, assistant city ticket agent of the Santa Fe railway in this city, and George Walker, a well-known mining man of Colorado Springs, left yesterday for Hawthorne, Nev., where they will make their future home and engage in the mining business. They already have several claims in that locality and expect to add to their holdings.

LOCOMOTIVE MAGNATE HERE—John H. Converse, head of the Baldwin locomotive works, with headquarters in Philadelphia, is a guest at the Antlers. Yesterday he made a trip to Cripple Creek, accompanied by his daughter and a party of friends. The party are on their return from the Pacific coast.

WILL MAKE HOME HERE—Clarence H. Hawkins of Paris, Tenn., has accepted a position in the law firm of Orr & Cunningham of this city and arrived with his family on Friday to make his home in Colorado Springs. He has a cousin, H. N. Hawkins, in the law business in Denver, and a brother, Prince Hawkins, a lawyer in Boulder.

SECOND ANNUAL DINNER

Hypatia Society of Colorado College Entertains.

One of the most delightful events of the spring season in college circles was the second annual dinner of the Hypatia Literary society in Ticknor hall, last night.

The young ladies of Hypatia had as their guests of honor, Mrs. Slocum, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Johnston, Miss Loomis, Dr and Mrs. T. K. Urdahl. Others present were Messrs. Warner, Mitchell, C. A. Hedblom, E. Hedblom, Professor Stewart, Lieb, Niblo, Smillie, Morris, Harper, Richmond, Dietrich, Brown, Bascom, Professor Bennett, Cort, Alden, McQuatt.

The guests were welcomed by Miss Olive Buhoup, president of the society. Mrs. Slocum and Miss Loomis, in the parlors of Ticknor. A dainty course dinner was served. Decorations were arranged in green and white, the society's colors, and the room presented an artistic appearance. Marguerites, ferns and kinnikinnick were combined in the table floral pieces.

LATEST IN HOUSEHOLD LINENS.

From the Chicago Record-Herald.

No housewife needs to be told that household linen has its fashions, with everything else. At present white is in great favor, trimmed with very complicated and rich lace. For luncheon the table cloth is out of fashion. A fine Chinese mat is put on the table itself, and before each guest a round or square serviette is laid. These are prettily trimmed or embroidered with colored flowers. For large dinner parties white linen is in greatest favor. The linen is as richly trimmed as possible, with renaissance or Colbert lace. The napkins and table center match the cloth.

For curtains, hung beneath heavy silk or wool, India muslin is used. Covered with flounces, it serves as a kind of blind. The flounces are edged with fine silvered ribbon, an effect that is newer than trimmings of filet or lace.

A pretty innovation for sheets, which are more and more richly trimmed, consists of a large band, richly embroidered or trimmed with little flounces of linen and edged with real valenciennes lace. This band, being made of very fine linen and not being washed as often as the sheet itself, is fastened to the sheet by beading, through which pretty ribbon is passed, finishing in a dainty bow. Pillow cases are made to match.

FATE OF A TALEBEARER.

Washington Dispatch to the New York Times.

There was a clerk who spat and a stenographer who told. In the department of justice. The clerk spat by habit, and scorned the signs hanging around on the walls reminding him that it was not only unhabitual to expectorate on the floor, but was also forbidden by the rules of the district board of health. Also the clerk spurned the protests of the stenographer, who, being a nice man, one who does not eat tobacco and has no imperative need to spit, objected bitterly to the habit of his fellow-servant.

At last, realizing that his protests were in vain, the stenographer told. But, instead of telling his superiors in the department of justice, he wrote a formal letter to the tuberculosis commissioners of the district. Shocked that such a flagrant violation of the law could be going on unchecked in the department of justice, the tuberculosis commissioners descended in a body upon Attorney General Bonaparte. They told on the stenographer who had told on the clerk who spat. Thereupon Mr. Bonaparte dispenses justice on the spot. He discharged the clerk who spat, in violation of the district law. And then, that justice might be even-handed, he discharged the stenographer who told, not for telling, but for telling the wrong people.

SELECTING THE PRESENT

Latest book is the most beautiful we ever issued.

Pictures in natural colors of 97 presents for the users of Arbuckles' ARIOSA Coffee. Will be sent free to any one who writes for it.

Do you realize what a great house this Arbuckles' ARIOSA Coffee is? As many as 30,000 letters for presents are received here in a day. In a year we despatched four million individual presents to our customers — presents that brought letters of thanks and appreciation in return.

Here is one from Mrs. De Jarnette:

"I appreciate highly the beautiful presents sent me from you from time to time and will say that your coffee is the leading brand on the market. * * * the purest, best and healthiest coffee ever made. I have been a user of it for 25 years and will want it as long as life lasts. The coffee is worth three times its present market value."

Millions of persons in every part of the country drink no other Coffee, and swell the sales of Arbuckles' ARIOSA until they exceed the combined sales of all the other packaged coffees.

Arbuckles' ARIOSA is the best Coffee for you, saves your money, and gives you presents besides. Speak softly but plainly to your grocer man if he tries to sell you bulk coffee. Tell him you know.

If your grocer won't supply, write to ARBUCKLE BROS., New York City.

THAT ARBITRATION.

THE most successful arbitration of recent years was the one just completed by the chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission and the United States Commissioner of Labor. One exception may perhaps be made—President Roosevelt's arbitration of the coal strike in Pennsylvania for there the strike was on and great bitterness had developed and in this latter case the strike had not yet been ordered but was only pending. The results however were fully as great in the latter case, for a general strike of trainmen would have paralyzed the railways leading out of Chicago and interfered most seriously with the business of the whole country.

Already the newspapers are beginning to talk of the possibility of seeking government arbitration in other industrial difficulties. This is one more instance of the tendency to seek national help in troubles that are local in their origin. Interstate transportation however can hardly be said to be local and the interference of the federal authorities in this case was authorized not only by law but by common sense. It is noteworthy that the law under which the railways invoked the aid of the federal commission was passed as long ago as 1898. This fact suggests that perhaps we do not so much need more legislation as an enforcement and application of legislation now in existence.

JEROME.

TO us it seems that the most interesting personality in this Thaw case is the District Attorney. Many articles have been written about him and the readers of newspapers are tolerably familiar with his antecedents and his previous record. An aristocrat in the sense of having well known ancestors for several hundred years who have been men prominent in the annals of New York, a man born to comparative affluence he has chosen to live in bachelor apartments on the East side and to work hard at his profession. He has chosen to go into politics in a way peculiarly his own and to assume the difficult and exacting duties of a district attorney in a city where those duties are probably more trying than anywhere else in the country. His last campaign is within the memory of all. He ran independently and was elected triumphantly, a wonderful tribute to his striking personality and the impression he had made of an absolutely honest able and straightforward public officer.

This case is the most disagreeable one he has ever been called upon to prosecute. The disgust he has felt for the whole vile mess has appeared more than once in his remarks. He undertook the prosecution as a public duty and has pressed it with all his ability to the end but one can see that it was distasteful. He has an utter contempt for women of the Evelyn type and it is easy to see that he found it hard to treat her with the semblance of respect which motives of policy rendered advisable before a jury. His task was rendered doubly difficult by his sincere belief that Thaw was a paranoiac responsible and sane in the statutory meaning of the words in that state but not much more than half witted. It was a difficult line to take before a jury to attempt to prove that Thaw was sane in the statutory sense and yet really insane so as not to be a safe person to leave at large. He did it with great ability and yet probably his argument seemed inconsistent to some of the jury.

To lawyers and to any one at all concerned in the academic and rhetorical aspects of the case the contrast between him and his antagonist, the counsel on the other side, has been extremely interesting. Delmas is a trial lawyer of a type that is growing rare now in the east. It is doubtful if there has been anybody at all like him in New York since the death of Howe Hummel's partner. He is probably a bigger man than Howe ever was but his style of oratory is similar—the florid rhetorical kind that was more common fifty years ago than it is now and is now more common in the south than in any other part of the country. Resourceful keen shrewd absolutely self-contained master of all the arts and devices known to the practice really learned in the law of long experience in criminal cases utterly unscrupulous in his methods he is thoroughly versed in the drilling and the handling of witnesses. He was the advocate best adapted probably of any in the country to undertake the defense in this kind of a case. His shrewdness and suave, [illegible] did [illegible] me almost as much as his methods. Nobody can suppose that he was personally interested in Thaw or his wife or his mother except purely as clients and yet his oratorical art made juror No 12 put his handkerchief to his eyes during the closing speech.

Jerome's oratory is of the modern one may say the Rooseveltian type. No flowers of rhetoric adorn it; its sole object is a clear and forceful presentation of his case. Perhaps he despises sentimentality; so much for the interest of his client, for the average juryman is more or less sentimental person notwithstanding his oath to be governed solely by the law and the evidence. Hampered by his inability to get evidence before the jury in dispute of the story told by the principal witness for the defense handicapped by the difficulty of getting the jury to understand how he [illegible] public of understanding the nature of the deed he committed when he murdered White irritated by the grandstand methods of the counsel on the other side he was placed in a position of great difficulty. He has discharged his distasteful duty with an ability that is universally recognized. The amount of work that he did in preparation for this case is tremendous. His cross examination of the first alleged expert put up by the defense showed that he had mastered the scientific works on alienism as few professional alienists have done. His grasp of the principles of law involved is shown by the fact that the judge in his charge followed his requests for instructions to the jury almost in their entirety. His effectiveness is evidenced by his securing a majority of the jury for a verdict of murder in the first degree.

Of the three prominent personalities in this case Delmas has won national reputation as an able criminal lawyer, Evelyn has demonstrated her ability as a consummate actress and Jerome has shown once more, and perhaps more completely than ever before owing to the difficulties of the case, his quality as a prosecuting attorney. Out of the muck of the whole case his figure stands out stern, manly and clean.

CONVENTIONS FOR DENVER

SOME brilliant genius has conceived the idea that Denver ought to go after the national conventions of both political parties for the year 1908. The Denver papers have taken the matter up and three out of four of them appear to favor the idea. So now they are trying to find out how much they would have to put up as a guaranty in order to have any show at all before the national committee when the matter is decided. It is alleged that $[illegible]0,000 might be enough.

Denver has good hotel accommodations and in that respect could probably take care of the conventions all right but there is no auditorium of any kind fit for a large meeting—nothing even as big or commodious as the Temple theater here. They would have to build one between now and a year hence. To be sure that was done in Kansas City but it is a risky proposition that the committee would look at askance [illegible] not even [illegible] has been definitely chosen.

But really there is no use in discussing whether [illegible] could take care of the conventions or not. [illegible] will [illegible] Denver [illegible] knows [illegible] in the basis of the [illegible] the United States is [illegible] Kansas City during the [illegible] until it gets within five hundred miles [illegible] there will be very little use in any city in Colorado [illegible] a national convention [illegible] to [illegible] be it last twice [illegible] in Chicago [illegible] The average expense per delegate [illegible] probably [illegible] as much. This alone without reference to the auditorium [illegible] enough to make it impossible for Denver to get these conventions.

It is all right to go after conventions [illegible] but it is a waste of time and energy trying to get things that are absolutely impossible.

PRAIRIE WEDDING

From the Kiowa Sentinel

Shorty Price and Miss Charley Johnson were married last Thursday near the home of the bride's mother the widow Johnson four miles north of town by the Rev. W. R. Donnell. Only the bride the groom and the minister were present. It took place south of the bride's home in the pasture. Both Shorty and the bride were riding the same horse, the girl in front. When the preacher requested them to join hands the bride took her hand back and presented her hand. After the ceremony was over the happy couple galloped on over the prairie on their way rejoicing.

NURSES' REGISTRY ASSOCIATION

To the Editor of The Gazette

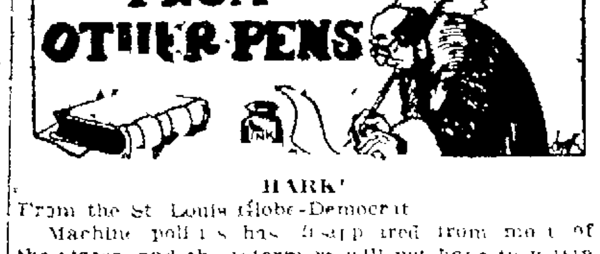

The stand taken by the Nurses' Registry association at our last meeting in upholding and endeavoring to raise the standard of our profession has been adversely criticised by the head of the Glockner institution which has recently started a training school that does not come up to the standard considered necessary some years ago. In this age of progress surely nurses are doing a good work in endeavoring to raise the standard of our profession rather than stand weakly by and see it lowered in our home town.

At our annual meeting we set [illegible] against admitting to membership pupils of this school [illegible] in our opinion are unfitted by want of education and the training necessary for the duties of our profession.

It being brought to our notice that the superintendent considered herself unfairly treated in not being told our reason for this action, our president and two members called on her to explain our views. She snapped her fingers in their faces and told them she did not care what their opinion was, as she had the backing of the doctors and the wealthy residents of this town and threatened [illegible] with a lawsuit. Our president answered: "Nothing would please us better than having it aired in open court. It's [illegible] light the better."

We, humble members of a noble profession have no backing but the honor and ideals of our moral rectitude and our faith in the [illegible] fair play in the community which we [illegible] and work to protect.

TIME TO BE CAREFUL

From the Lowell Courier-Citizen

There is yet no doubt that there should now arise a general tendency toward the prevention of industrial caution such as several of our thoughtful contemporaries have already testified. The recent oscillations of the price of securities, to quote an expression of Ambassador Bryce, have been aroused all along as a matter quite apart from the fundamental business of the country, which it is to be considered more and more in order to guard the writing is nevertheless lest this abounding confidence in the underlying actual prosperity of business be overdone and ultimately breed actual hardship, as it has invariably done sooner or later. In a word there seems to be dawning a lucid interval on the public mind—a revival of common sense in which it may be realized that our present wellbeing cannot endure uninterrupted forever and that we may as well realize the danger of going too recklessly. Just as the financiers have seemingly begun to realize it in pursuing their more mercurial business in the buying and selling of shares in the country's business. That the present year offers any really menacing outlook is not yet asserted [illegible] that the machinery of trade can not be driven too fast and then too suddenly slowed down is now [illegible] true and the prudent engineer will hardly lash at full speed around a curve when it is possible from ordinary indications along the way that there may [illegible] obstructions ahead. The world knows [illegible] commercial activity generally is [illegible] annees of which has almost invariably been increased in the past by the reckless intoxications of acute prosperity.

The Growth of Naturalness

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger

THE perennial lament of recent times that the art of letter writing has gone out seems to have impressed many people with the belief that something very valuable and precious has been lost. Every few months an essayist recalls the good old times when the full and intimate exchange of confidences, the real clash of mind, the high courteous tone contributed to the delight and dignity of life. The plaint, in particular, is made that the correspondence between father and son and in general between members of the family has ceased or descended to a low and common plane. The boy is curt, flippant, lacking in reverence and in deference to his parents and the parents have [illegible] not exact the decent and seemly respect due to their position.

The age of long formal letters it is true has gone. The telegraph is an excellent convenience when urgent matters call for haste, the telephone is a handy conversation, the hurry of life curtails tedious effort and obliges studied compliment but it may be maintained that there is another reason—the people of this age are more unaffected, more direct, more open and vastly and delightfully more natural than their ancestors. Thackeray noting the disappearance of affectation in women as well as in men declared that the time would soon come when nobody would be ashamed to be perfectly natural.

An examination of any collection of letters written a century ago or even half a century ago or the perusal of the letters in a novel supposed to depict the life of a former time will disclose a stiff mannerism and an affectation which will strike a sensible man as quite depressing. The boy of [illegible] who was so priggish or so much in dread and awe of his father as to begin his letters with "honored and respected sir" would indeed be a curiosity. Those long dreary stretches of high strained sycophantic compliment that fearfully stilted and artfully manufactured language bearing the [illegible] indisputable marks of hypocrisy are repellent [illegible] things not beautiful. They were the rubbish and lumber of a bygone day when hoopskirts, patches until half a century ago [illegible] ornaments when the pallid [illegible] and the signs of [illegible] health [illegible] hearty and strong was thought to be a sign of coarseness.

Some good literature is no doubt lost in our stenographic age. The Horace Walpoles and the Mary Wortley Montagues no longer ply their delightful art but the writer with a genius for the epistolary craft is at the very best exceedingly rare and the [illegible] them consider what an immense gain in humanity [illegible] in the style of the modern boy's familiar and true "Dear Dad."

There is a closer sympathy between [illegible] young [illegible] gradually [illegible] the children [illegible] father [illegible] Men are the companions of their children and it is a familiarity which instead of breeding contempt brings a closer affection and establishes a more natural relation. It is scarcely credible that a century ago the president of a great university would have boxed and wrestled in his rooms at a summer resort with his sturdy eldest son in accordance with the wont of a justly celebrated American. It would have caused a great scandal.

The tendency toward the purely human, the unaffected, the natural, is to be seen in almost every nook and cranny of life. There are of course many exceptions. Some of the more noticeable of the vulgar rich go to summer resorts carrying the habits of self exploitation and their tawdry finery and buckram routine but men of cultivation and wealth and sensible people go to the most primitive rough nature on the most friendly terms and get close to earth and its larger simplicity.

In every haunt of real men and women there seems to be less and less of affectation. The great force in wearing down the superfluous corners, the stiffness, the unreality has been the business life of America. The hustle of the modern time has no doubt taken from life some of its outer grace and beauty of a certain kind but the loss in courtliness of form has been more than compensated for in the great growth of genuine friendliness and better understanding among all kinds of people. The man today in business or in any sort of active life knows multitudes of human beings where his predecessors in the same pursuits knew but a handful. Men today by means of swift transportation on railroads, by the use of trolley cars, the telegraph and the telephone cover more ground, see more people, talk with many more, know them much better and thus great masses of the population are bound together more firmly and closely into the social fabric.

The proper punishment for affectation is contempt and to such a fate it is being doomed by our better modern time. The man with a noticeable manner in our day is marked as a man with a bad manner. And to have reached this standard of simplicity is a great gain. People in general who are taking short cuts in every direction are aiming toward openness and directness which are the fashion and the rule. The basis of plain dealing, good intention and frankness and of nearly all the valuable human attributes and qualities is sincerity and in sincerity is the guide in manners and morals a genuine reform of great value is under way. For the spirit and tone of the people is reflected in their manners and customs and determine the character of the times.

Manners are more important than laws. Upon them in a great measure the laws depend. The law touches us here and there and now and then. Manners are what vex and soothe, corrupt or purify, exalt or debase, barbarize or refine by a constant steady, uniform insensible operation like that of the air we breathe in. They give their whole form and color to our lives. According to their quality they aid our morals, they supply them or totally destroy them.

NATIONAL ARBITRATION AND PEACE CONGRESS

AMERICA NOW LEADS ALL NATIONS IN THE BROAD POPULAR MOVEMENT TO END WAR AND COMPEL DISARMAMENT

PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENTS OF NATIONAL ARBITRATION AND PEACE CONGRESS.

Proposed Carnegie Palace of Peace

THE time seems to have come when the movement for the abolition of war among civilized nations is no longer a dream of well meaning theorists, but has become a popular agitation. That such is the fact is made evident by the universal interest that is now given the subject. The movement is not confined to any one class. All classes of society, both the learned and the unlearned, unite in a more or less forcible demand that international law shall take the place of violence and the shedding of human blood. The national arbitration and peace congress which will be held in New York April 15-17 is an earnest that the American people at least are determined to continue the agitation.

That the American interest in the subject has made a deep impression on the people of other nations is also apparent. The awarding of the Nobel peace prize to President Roosevelt is significant of this. The American position has been demonstrated most practically by the munificent gift of Andrew Carnegie to the international peace body. It is the most weighty assurance yet given that a permanent peace congress will be established at The Hague.

Other nations are also wide awake and stirring. From the orient comes the news that the Japanese will send delegates to the next Hague conference instructed to favor disarmament. That of itself shows wonderful progress, for the Japanese have profited largely by the fortunes of war. A telling evidence of the popularity of the movement in Great Britain is to be found in the attitude of the press. There is no one in England better able to recognize the trend of popular opinion than William T. Stead, and he has been advocating the doctrines of peace in many lands, even appearing at the Vatican to suggest a papal encyclical in favor of the limitation of armaments.

In this country the peace agitation is being made by a great number of associations of various kinds. It is a union of these bodies that is to hold the coming congress in New York. Some of the leading American peace associations are the Chicago Peace society, the Minnesota Peace society, the Kansas State Peace society, the New York German-American Peace society and the Arbitration Peace society of Cincinnati. There is also a strong branch of the Interparliamentary union, which includes in its foreign membership such men as Lord Weardale, Count Apponyi and Baron d'Estournelles.

Among the first to embrace the cause actively were the labor unions. The American Federation of Labor, at its convention at Minneapolis last November, passed a resolution favoring peace among the nations on the plea that it would promote the interests of the laboring class. It was arranged at the convention that President Roosevelt and congress should be asked to obtain the co-operation of the powers at the next Hague conference to promote obligatory arbitration and a periodic international peace congress. Similar action was taken at the last convention of the British trades unions, held at Liverpool last September.

The Woman's Christian Temperance union has adopted peace agitation as one of its principal fields of labor. It has established arbitration and peace departments in twenty-three countries, and similar organizations exist in twenty-nine states.

Since the organized movement began no less than fifteen international peace congresses have been held, the last being at Milan in 1906. Two gatherings of this great representative peace association have been held in America, the first in connection with the great world's fair at Chicago in 1893 and the other at Boston. The only American gathering of the Interparliamentary union was in connection with the St. Louis fair. Until shortly previous to that date there had been no organization of the union in this country. The first branch was established by Richard Bartholdt, representative in congress from Missouri.

The international peace congress is the direct successor of the great international peace congresses which were held over fifty years ago. They were at London in 1843, Brussels in 1845, Paris in 1849, Frankfort in 1850, London in 1851, Edinburgh in the spring of 1853 and in Glasgow in the fall of the same year. Then they stopped, for the impending discords of the Crimean war and of our own civil war drove peace from the possibilities of those years.

Americans were well represented at these congresses, and Elihu Burritt and Amasa Walker were prominent figures. Among the great Europeans were John Bright, Richard Cobden, Victor Hugo, Emile de Girardin and many of that type. Not until 1878 was another gathering of this class held, and that was in connection with the Paris exposition. It was in 1889 that the beginning of the present series was held in the hall of the Palace of the Trocadero, under the auspices of the French republic.

Since then this congress has held annual sessions, save that none was held in 1895, and again in 1898 and 1899, when the United States was at war with Spain and the Boers were resisting England, no sessions were held; hence the series counts up only its fifteenth number this year.

The successive places of meeting have been Paris, London, Rome, Berne, Chicago, Antwerp, Budapest, Hamburg, Paris, Glasgow, Monaco, Rouen, Boston and Milan. European nations naturally have been far more largely represented than the United States, both because of the nearness of the meeting places and the greater practical concern of the nations in the subjects of the discussions. The movement has gained strength constantly from the beginning, and a vast amount of effective work has been done.

Mr. Carnegie has been deeply interested in the movement both in this country and abroad. In 1905 he told the students of the University of St. Andrews that if the good people of all parties and creeds, sinking for a time other political questions whenever the issue of war arises, were to demand arbitration no government dare refuse. He declared that the people have it in their power in every emergency to save their country from war and to insure unbroken peace. It is safe to say that if the level headed philanthropist is present at the dedication of his splendid Palace of Peace, which is set for 1911, he will be the central figure. It has been proposed that an international exposition in favor of peace be held at The Hague at that time.

The second Hague conference will begin May 15, and the American peace congress, to be held a month earlier, is designed to lead up to it. It is expected that over 1,000 delegates from all parts of the country will be present and that addresses will be made by Cardinal Gibbons, Mr. Carnegie, William T. Stead, James Bryce, the new British ambassador, and many others equally prominent. In all the proceedings from day to day these objects will predominate—the formation of a periodic congress of the nations at The Hague, the limitation and reduction of armed strength and a treaty among all powers represented at the congress for obligatory arbitration in international disputes. When these are accomplished the world will be a better and a safer place of residence.

It must not be forgotten that arbitration has not always been popular in this country. Time was when the mention of it would have been howled down with great emphasis. It was tried in 1794, when an arbitration clause was placed in the treaty between England and the United States, largely through the efforts of foreigners. The popular feeling against such a pacific method of settling international disputes was so strong that John Jay, its American sponsor, was burned in effigy at Boston. The progress of the expedient was slow at first, but since that exciting time at Boston 250 quarrels between nations have been settled by arbitration or by special commissions.

All through the history of the congresses has run an earnest spirit of effort and sacrifice. Distinguished statesmen, clergymen, scholars and professional men have been identified with the movement ever since the first session was held. They have differed from each other at times in matters of detail, but they have been one in their opposition to war or to the use of force in any way as a substitute for justice.

The practice for the congresses has been for a programme of important topics to be arranged for discussion by the most competent delegates, and then to have the matter thrown open to the floor, after which a resolution would be acted upon to express the opinion of the congress. These resolutions have some similarity during the years, varying from time to time as exigencies demanded special attention, such as the massacres of the Armenians, the Boer war or the troubles in China. But the one topic which has been foremost in every congress has been arbitration in some form or another. That has been steadily pressed upon the attention of the nations.

Disarmament has also been another prominent theme. Gradual or otherwise, it has been up for discussion at every session.

Yet all of these nations, big and little, which are longing so ardently for peace are all the time preparing for war. In the warlike spectacle now presented by the world are included a fighting strength of about 15,000,000 men and a collection of 700 great warships, to say nothing of other death dealing agencies. The United States, too, the great peacemaker among nations, whose chief executive has promised to call a second peace conference at The Hague in May, is quite as active in the business of "being prepared" as the others.

The Medical Expert Witness of Today

IN most of the causes celebres of the present day the medical expert figures largely. So notably the fashion has he become in the trial of cases of homicide that he who contemplates the adoption of the practice of medicine and surgery as a profession, taking stock of the various attractive possibilities to be reckoned, does not forget that the fee of the medical expert is far too considerable to be despised. The fees of the experts in the Thaw trial aggregated the great sum of $100,000.

In these days of subdivision of labor the general practitioner of medicine and surgery has been relegated to the background, and the specialist has come to the front. So engrossing and, withal, so lucrative is the business of furnishing expert testimony in cases in which the integrity of the mental apparatus is involved that many eminent men have become specialists in that direction. Among these the alienist who is best known and appreciated in this country is Allan McLane Hamilton, grandson of the famous American statesman, Alexander Hamilton. It was Dr. Hamilton's opinion in the Thaw case that led to the appointment of a commission to determine the mental condition of the slayer of Stanford White.

No Longer Invincible.

When the medical expert first began to take part in criminal causes, he was received by judge and jury with great respect, not unmixed with a certain amount of awe. In more recent times events have occurred which have served to place this specially qualified medical witness on a somewhat less elevated plane. This perceptible waning of his prestige is due to several causes. It is a situation partly at least of his own making, due to the spirit of partisanship which is so often shown by medical experts on the stand.

Even more to be regretted is it that their decline in the popular estimation has come from the growing belief that they can be influenced by pecuniary considerations. It is not likely that cases of this lamentable nature are at all frequent. It has happened often enough, however, to diminish the value of expert testimony as a whole and to give those who furnish it a lower standing in a court of justice.

Ideally, expert evidence should be of inestimable value as the only way in which vital facts may be brought to the attention of the jury. It is, of course, of the greatest importance that one who poses as a medical expert should be qualified to act as such. The least doubt on that point is fatal to his influence. Lawyers are not always fortunate in their selection of expert witnesses. Sometimes they cannot afford to pay the big fee demanded by the learned specialist and quite as frequently they are not well enough informed in the matter to make a proper choice. Sometimes the fault lies with the expert. He is not skilful enough to meet the hypothetical questions of counsel, which, it must be remembered, are not framed to make the expert's job a sinecure. In the Thaw trial certain of these hypothetical questions devised by the opposing counsel covered pages of typewritten copy, and one propounded by the prosecution consumed almost an hour in its reading. Occasionally the expert witness is so anxious to achieve notoriety that he puts himself in an absurd position. Jurors are not supposed to be able to detect ignorance on the part of a medical witness, so they are apt to ignore his evidence altogether.

Not Easy to Convince.

Strange as it may appear, there are few cases in which expert testimony is received with so great indifference as in those for the determination of sanity. The average unprofessional citizen seems to recognize no species of insanity that is unaccompanied by mental vacuity or frenzy. All other forms do not appeal to him, and he is quite likely to be skeptical as to their actual existence. Instead of being overawed by the decidedly appalling nomenclature and technical expressions that slip so familiarly from the lips of the expert, he is apt to grow suspicious and to fancy that an effort to mystify him is being made.

As a matter of fact, a jury cares very little indeed for an expert's opinion. It prefers to depend on its own observations. If the person whose sanity is being inquired into is able to answer questions intelligently, it is pretty difficult to convince the ordinary juryman that he is insane. The jury is especially inclined to be suspicious when a medical witness appears in the role of associate counsel, sitting beside the attorney who called him, taking copious notes and making many whispered suggestions. In the estimation of the ordinary juryman this stamps him as a partisan who has come to court prepared to fight for his side, and that only. The wise medical witness takes no other active part in the proceedings than to suggest to the counsel who employs him the questions that are to be asked the experts of the other side in cross examination.

ALLAN McLANE HAMILTON, NOTED MEDICAL EXPERT.

The Suspicious Layman.

Nowadays the view held by the public is that a certain number of experts swear on one side in opposition to the same number on the other. In a trial there is no possible chance for experts to agree, for the witnesses on either side are not asked to give opinions based on the same assumption, and each counsel asks questions from a different standpoint. Each attorney selects facts bearing on his own view of the case.

Expert opinion is of no value whatever unless the assumptions in the hypothetical questions are true. It is not to be expected of the average juryman that he should know whether or not this is the case, and he doesn't profess to know. He regards the hypothetical question as a cunning device of the lawyers to muddle him, and he includes the doctors in the conspiracy.

Of Quite Another Sort.

Still, it must be remembered that there are men so well qualified to give expert medical evidence and so unassailable in their integrity that their opinions carry great weight. The juryman may not comprehend what they say, but he has no disposition to question the truth of it. It is sufficient for him that it is the best judgment of a man whom he knows to be unbiased.

When Allan McLane Hamilton declares that a person whom he has examined is afflicted with any of the myriad forms of insanity it means something. In the face of such a declaration no judge or jury would care to assume the responsibility of ignoring the matter. Such an assertion made in open court during the Thaw trial put a sudden stop to all further legal proceedings until a commission had determined whether or not the distinguished alienist was right in his diagnosis.

Dr. Hamilton's father was the youngest son of a man to whom the American people owe more than may be expressed in words. This Philip Hamilton was the second of the great statesman's sons to bear the name, the first Philip having died of a wound received in a duel fought on the very spot on the west bank of the Hudson, at Weehawken, N. J., on which his illustrious father received his deathblow from the hand of Aaron Burr but three years later. The younger Philip was a lawyer and was once an assistant district attorney in New York county. His son was educated very carefully and chose medicine as a profession. He soon rose to great eminence as a specialist in nervous diseases and in time became an authority on the subject, his works being used as text books in many medical schools.

Dr. Hamilton was already famous as a medical expert when he was called by the government to testify at the trial of the assassin of President Garfield. Since then he has maintained his position as chief among American alienists.

ANNIE RUSSELL IN "A MID-SUMMER NIGHT DREAM"

A lovely spectacle, some beautiful music, vivacious acting and much rollicking fun—[illegible] ment, diverting, satisfying and composed more or less of the stuff that dreams are made of—all this is the Wagenhals & Kemper production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," in which the favorite actress, Annie Russell, is being starred in the role of "Puck" and which comes to the Opera house next Saturday evening.

Rich groupings of figure and costume, plenty of pageantry and the gilded pomp of court to contrast with the fresh, luscious greens and yellows of woodland, hill and dale, with the added satisfaction of the beautiful Mendelssohn music, augmenting the effect to a marked degree, an actress of international fame in the leading role, a support consisting of the best company of Shakespearian players that the New York Rialto could furnish; comprises about all that possibly could be done in the producing of the most exquisite comedy ever conceived and written.

The production comes to this city exactly as revealed at the new Astor theater on Broadway, where it was the inaugural attraction, travelling in special train, four baggage cars for the huge scenic effects and adequate accommodations for the one hundred and twenty-seven people which comprise the supporting company. Miss Russell, whose name has stood for years in this country and England, identified with the highest and best in the art of stage representation has never before been seen in the south, and she is now entered upon her initial tour through the land of Dixie in the biggest success in which she has ever appeared. The tour will be of brief duration, comprising only the principal cities, as contracts for another Broadway presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" are imperative.

Critics from Hazlitt down have ever bewailed the absence of the dream-feeling in all previous productions of this play. Once, in the Phelp's production at Sadler's Wells they were said to have had it. Phelps, it would seem, used a gauze curtain or something of the sort and showed his figures in a kind of mist that gave the vague, faraway sense one associates with things of the fancy. Gauze is not used in the Russell production, but the lights are dim many times and there are plenty of other excellent first aids to illusion. Colored lights bob up in the flowers when "Puck" kisses them, an owl hoots and blinks his eyes and a whole troupe of little elves and fairies, very well trained in the antics of fairyland, as we understand them, play leap frog, tumble down hill and indulge in a most bewitching crooning that gets as near the soughing of night winds in the trees as any one could wish. Miss Russell is a sort of Puck in pastel shades. She comes in first flying very prettily by means of a wire arrangement, graceful and appealing in her role of the madcap fay. She has a sweet singing voice and her song "Up and Down" is charmingly given. With a pleasing arrangement of the music by Augustus Barratt, who was brought over from England by Messrs. Wagenhals and Kemper to make special arrangement of the Mendelssohn music for this production.

A popular element of the play is the fooling of Bottom and his fellow actors, a Bottom who is extremely funny and who actually manages to be so even when his own round, only face is hidden by the ass head. John Bunny is the Bottom, a most absurd but most magnificently dense, an "ass" on a colossal scale.

Other well known names appearing in the supporting company are Edwin Mordaunt, Atkins Lawrence, Oswald Yorke, Thomas Coffin Cook, Lionel Adams, Catherine Proctor, Lansing Rowan and James Young.

HENRIETTA CROSMAN.

Henrietta Crosman will appear at the Opera house on next Thursday in "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy," coming direct from the Bijou theater in New York and with the distinction of one of the most popular successes in her career. Miss Crosman in "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy" plays on high part as she did in "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" and "Mistress Nell," with the difference that the present character is of an up-to-date type of young woman whereas Kitty and Nell belonged to the past. "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy" is a modern [illegible] with scenes laid in England. It has been described by certain critics as a farce rather than a comedy. Before Miss Crosman made a distinct New York hit in it the play had scored a notable London success, having run the greater part of last season at the Duke of York's theater. It is considered among the cleverest comedies of recent times, one of the best ever brought to this country from England. Miss Crosman as Peggy O'Mara is a young woman whose character is aptly described by her mother, the Widow O'Mara in the remark, "Nothing's impossible where Peggy's concerned when she's in one of her wild moods," from which it may be gathered that the girl occasionally departs from strict lines of conventionality. Peggy means no harm; she simply doesn't see why one's conduct should be judged by appearances and the worst construct always put on everything. Peggy's mother schemes to have the girl marry Lord Anthony Crackenthorpe. Peggy launches a counterplot which aims to have her [illegible] Lord Anthony's wife. His relatives are conspiring to keep him from marrying because he supports them. Peggy delights in teasing Lord Anthony's family and at length she pretends she has eloped with Jimmy Keppel, younger son of the house. Entanglements from this escapade arise from Peggy's failure to tell Jimmy she is supposed to have run away with him. "All-of-a-Sudden Peggy" is credited with an uncommon share of wit and humor. The comedy is brisk and keen, the situations hilarious, the characters droll and amusing. It is a rush of mirth and merriment. Miss Crosman is at her best as the vivacious, impetuous and affectionate Peggy who "never looks before she leaps till after it's over."

AGGREGATION OF HEAD-LINERS AT THE EMPIRE

While it seems an impossible task to maintain the high standard of excellence at popular prices that has obtained at the Empire the last month, Manager Ellis emphatically declares that this week's offering excells anything thus far seen here. The Four Bannto Brothers, truly the emperors of music on the vaudeville stage, have been secured at an almost fabulous salary. This quartet of musicians are as well known throughout Holland, their native country, for their ability as musicians and composers as the peerless Sousa is in this country. They bear medals from European monarchs testifying to their rare musical accomplishments. Manager Ellis considers this act the greatest possible treat for his patrons, and it is hoped that appreciation of his herculean efforts in this direction will be evinced by a liberal patronage. The McHenry Brothers, monarchs of modern comedy and singers of extraordinary endowment, who bear an enviable reputation as entertainers in the large eastern cities, are here by reason of the ill health of one of the duo. They have consented to appear this week and will then spend a month or two in the remote parts of our health-giving mountains before returning to New York. The engagement of this team in a town of this size would otherwise be impossible. Major McGuire and wife, the champion British broadsword manipulators, whose work is unique and highly entertaining, will put on a twenty minutes' stunt of exciting and nerve raking tricks with the broadsword. Leo Kendal, whose ability as a Dutch comedian is said to have made names for a great many musical comedies, will contribute his share to the entertainment. A new illustrated song will be sung and a cracker-jack moving picture film will be run. Manager Ellis feels assured of continued crowded houses throughout the week.

STYLES IN THE ZOO

New York Woman Is Tailor to the Elephant and the Monkey.

"Yes," said Miss Florence Zeibarth, head of the costume department at the Hippodrome, to a reporter for the New York Tribune—"yes, I'm just what you said: an animal dressmaker. Once upon a time, when I worked for a Fifth avenue dressmaker, I used to fit fashionable women. Later I had charge of a department store's workroom. But I find it much more amusing to make clothes for elephants and monkeys and zebus; for ballet girls and all the magnificent pageants and spectacles that are put on the Hippodrome stage than I did to fit smart women.

"In all I am modiste to 12 elephants, two monkeys, five zebus, six camels and hundreds of ponies and horses. It is great fun. At first I was afraid to tackle the elephants, they are such colossal creatures, and they swayed and rocked so alarmingly. And the zebus, the sacred cows of India, although they are such little, low things, they were terribly wild.

"The first time I threw a blanket over a zebu to fit it to his hump he kicked up wildly, tore around the stables like one possessed, rampaged through the property-room, demolishing properties right and left, and chased me, his poor, trembling dressmaker, and his attendants, right up the runway onto the stage. My, but I was frightened out of my life!

Monkeys Hard to Make Keep Still.

"The camels are mild, sweet tempered creatured. They don't mind me a bit, although it's quite a nice little matter to get their blankets to set stylishly over their two humps. You have to make them kneel down to try on their clothes. The dromedaries, too. They have one hump. Like the camels, they are mild and gentle. They never show any affection, as the elephants do.

"As for the horses. They are so thoroughly trained and so used to handling that they never give me a minute's bother.

"In fact, I'd rather fit any animal in the outfit than tackle the two monkeys that are going to ride on the dogs' backs in burlesque of one of the equestrian numbers—they are such fidgety little beasts, and they keep up such an excited chatter, and show their teeth and bite and scratch. A couple of attendants have to hold a monkey when I measure and fit it.

"Togo, the better natured of the two, has a waist measure of 17 inches and length of trousers leg of 10 inches—rather a difference between his measurements and those of Tom and Jennie, our two young leading elephants. Tom wears a 72-inch collar, his sylph-like waist measures 250 inches and his trousers' leg measures 120 inches.

The Elephant in His Cakewalk.

"In his great cake-walking stunt, in which he cakewalks with a real, human ballet girl, Tom will wear a man's full dress suit of the richest, heaviest black broadcloth. It took no little contriving, in addition to the measuring, cutting and fitting, to produce a perfectly satisfactory suit, for in order to expedite Tom's dressing and undressing everything had to be simplified as much as possible. So the whole suit goes in two pieces—the trousers, which fasten around the waist like any pair of trousers, and the stand-up collar, with turn-over points, the black bow tie, the shirt front, cuffs, waistcoat and coat, all of which are sewed together and go on as one garment, fastening invisibly down the back seam of the coat. The tails of the coat hook together and conceal Tom's own tail.

"Dressing Tom is a work of time. Two of the keepers have to take hold of a hind leg and lift it into the leg of his trousers. Then they grip the other, and putting forth all their strength, lift that in. Next they grasp one of his forelegs, which answers for a man's arm, through the coat sleeve; then they slip in the other and then they hook him up behind.

"Last of all goes on the tall silk hat, which fastens behind Tom's ears and under his chin with an elastic. This hat was made right in our workrooms. As men's hats go it is about size No. 38. After measuring Tom's head we made a pattern of heavy buckram and fitted it carefully. It had not only to look well, you see, it had to stay on, through all Tom's prancings and fancy pirouetting, as if it grew there. That accomplished, we covered it, using the same material as men's silk hats are covered with.

Jenny Very Fond of the Dressmaker.

"Jennie, Tom's companion in misery, is going to look very smart in the hussar uniform we have been making for her, with its white trousers, red coat braided with gold across the chest, and cape trimmed with black astrakhan falling off the left shoulder, and high plumed hat. At her side hangs a sword, with which she fences with the major domo, taking it from her scabbard with her trunk and replacing it by the same means when her bout is finished.

"Eighty-two yards of cloth went to the making of Jennie's costume, and it is all the best. Jennie would wear out lightweight, flimsy goods in a week.

"To fit the elephants I generally stand on a stepladder. Both Tom and Jerry love to be fitted, conceiving it to be in the nature of petting. Jennie in particular is sweet and affectionate, slapping her trunk around and patting me caressingly all the time I am fitting her.

"Every time the performance is changed new blankets for the animals taking part are in order. In one of the numbers, in which the elephants wore blankets of gold cloth, brocaded satin or heavy plush, the gold cloth blankets cost $250 apiece.

"Thirty-five women are kept busy all the year round in the workrooms, and when a new piece is to be put on the number often rises to 100."

"IT'S ONLY ANOTHER AGENT"

Men Who Make a Living Ringing Front Door Bells.

From the Kansas City Star.

There are many men and women in Kansas City who make a living by peddling and canvassing from door to door. The majority of the things they sell are worthless or could be bought for much less at a store. It is the "talk" that sells them.

Not long ago this city was canvassed by a man who sold hundreds of water filters. They were supposed to keep germs and microbes out of drinking water. The contrivance consisted of a piece of rubber hose and a bit of wire netting. It would keep out a fish or a frog, but would not interfere with the travels of a germ. The same man had a doorbell that was guaranteed to ring louder, work easier and cost less than any bell on the market. The bell [illegible] than dozens of others, but the [illegible] wonderful flow of talk sold hundreds.

Other things these agents handle to advantage are can openers, hot pan lifters, patent cake pans, skirt binding and self-threading needles. Burglar alarms and combination tools find a good sale, too.

The Enlarged Picture Fiend.

The fellow who takes pictures to be enlarged is a regular caller. His is a big business, and the money he gets is nearly all profit. He gets from $1.50 to $5 for an enlarged picture that costs him 50 cents, frame and all. Many thousands of these enlarged pictures are in the homes of Kansas City.

Medical books sell well. There are few homes without a copy of Dr. Somebody's book upon home doctoring.

Soliciting subscriptions to magazines gives employment to many men and women. A woman solicitor recently through here holds a record of 47,000 subscriptions, obtained in less than three years. She has visited every state in the Union and receives a salary of $200 a month.

Patent trousers buttons and clothes hangers are sold by the gross every week by agents, and the vender of soaps and perfumes finds it a rich field.

The canvasser for piano and dancing lessons has appeared of late and is in the class of the agent who goes from house to house teaching German, French or Italian.

There are venders of dog biscuits, potato peelers, patent medicine, stove and silver polish, glove cleaning liquids, electric belts, skirt fasteners, installment jewelry and furniture, fire extinguishers and bed bug poison. There are scores of other things and thousands of dollars are expended every year by Kansas City people on these things.

That it pays the agent is proven by the ever increasing number of people who are in it.

The Secret of an Agent's Success.

"What's the secret of success in this business?" one of the agents was asked.

"Perseverance," he replied quickly. "Stickativeness will make anything go. A good gift of gab will help wonderfully, of course, and a good talker will outsell a poor one. But the thing that wins is to never be discouraged, but to keep on going and going, no matter whether a sale is made or not.

"I'm in the picture enlarging line. Many a day I've tramped till nearly night and been rebuffed and cursed and chased by dogs, and not one sale had I made, and then, in the last hour I'd get an order with a profit of $4 or $5 in it for me. In the joy of that success I'd forget the trials that had gone before."

KIDNEY DISEASES CAUSE ONE-THIRD OF THE TOTAL DEATHS.

When the Kidneys fail to perform their functions properly by not straining out the poisonous waste matter from the blood as it passes through them, the poisons are carried by the circulation to every part of the body, deranging the different organs. This causes heart trouble, stomach trouble, sluggish liver and a host of other ills, all due to deranged Kidneys.

FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE

corrects irregularities and cures Kidney and Bladder diseases in every form, tones up the whole system, and the diseases that have resulted from disordered Kidneys disappear, because the cause has been removed. Commence taking FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE at the first sign of danger. Do not risk having Bright's Disease or Diabetes.

CURED OF BRIGHT'S DISEASE.

Mr. Robert G. Burke, Elnora, Saratoga Co., N. Y., writes: "I am glad to have an opportunity of telling what magnificent results I have had from using FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE after having tried other advertised medicines and several physicians. Before I began it I had to get up from 12 to 20 times each night to relieve my bladder. I was all bloated up with dropsy and my eyesight was so impaired that I could scarcely see one of my family across the room. In fact, I was so badly used up that I had given up hope of living when I was urged by a friend to try FOLEY'S KIDNEY CURE. One 50-cent bottle worked wonders, and before I had taken the third bottle the superfluous flesh had gone, as well as all other symptoms of Kidney trouble. My friends were surprised that I was cured, as they all thought I was going to die. Every few days some one comes from miles away to learn the name of the wonderful medicine that cured me of Bright's Disease, and not one that has tried it has failed to be benefitted."

GOOD NEWS

For Nevada Gold King Stockholders

You will remember that when we first advertised Nevada Gold King stock we said we had a surprise in store for the stockholders when the stock reached 5c a share. We thought then that it would keep us hustling to make our promise good by that time, but we now find that we are able to make this announcement before the stock reaches 5c a share. You will remember that the Nevada Gold King started business owning six lode claims or 120 acres in the famous Washoe mining district, Nevada. These were the Gold King, Gold Coin, Independence, Hillsboro, Colorado and Modoc claims. We can now announce that the directors have secured two additional claims adjoining the above, namely, the Tacoma and Bonanza King claims, or 40 acres more of very desirable mineral territory, giving the company complete ownership today to 160 acres. These claims have been acquired without the expense of a single dollar to the stockholders and without paying out a share of the treasury stock of the company. The promoters—the original owners of the Nevada Gold King company have paid for these claims and have deeded them to the company without cost. They believe that they will be more than repaid through the advance of the intrinsic value of the stock held by them, at the same time allowing all shareholders to profit through the increased assets of the company. But this is not all—the directors are not yet satisfied—they want to make of the Nevada Gold King one of the great big mining corporations of Nevada, and to this end have been figuring on 40 acres in one of the most promising mining districts of Nevada, and within a week they expect to be able to announce that this property has been secured to the company, giving the company title to Nevada Gold King Mining Company just secured Tacoma and Bonanza King claims adjoining present holdings. Fine showing, adds great value to stock. Development progressing rapidly. Will open up mine here without doubt.

200 ACRES OF MINERAL LAND

In the meantime development work is progressing as rapidly as money, brains and brawn can do it and we expect a telegram any day announcing the opening up of rich mineral on the territory already acquired by the company. The present price of the stock is

4 CENTS A SHARE

Next price 5c, from where it will be rapidly advanced. It will be but a short time when 10c Nevada Gold King stock will be in big demand and we do not expect to see the stock stop short of a quarter of a dollar per share, and even at that price it may look cheap in 60 days' time. We know this property—we have personally examined it—and we know that it has the ear-marks of becoming one of the great big mines of the state of Nevada. Mr. E. G. Morath, a mine manager of 20 years' experience, has charge of the active development of the mines of the company. He is also the general manager of the "ROCKY HILL MINE," adjoining. This is a big mine, with its own mills, electric plant, etc., and one that is turning out gold bullion right along. The Commonwealth, the Selby Consolidated and the big Harris mine, are all located in this section, and the famous Comstock and other mines are not far distant and in the same range of mountains.

NOT A BETTER BUY TODAY IN NEVADA STOCKS THAN NEVADA GOLD KING AT ANY PRICE UNDER 10c A SHARE. A limited amount offered at 4c a share. Sale begins Monday morning at 8:30. We expect all of this stock to be taken up very rapidly. Telephone in your order at once, or call in person. We sold a large amount of this stock in the past few days at 3 1-2 cents and could have sold many thousands more at the same price. We anticipate that there will be such a large demand for the 4-cent stock that it also will be oversubscribed. Therefore, anyone who bought stock from us, in our office at 3 1-2 cents a share, or at any other price, no matter how much stock they bought or what they paid for it, bring it to our office any time Monday and we will pay you 1-2 cent a share advance over the price you paid. No strings to this offer—there are no conditions attached. Bring in your stock and get your profit. We make this offer for ourselves not for the Nevada Gold King company. We know what the company has—we know what the stock is going to do—we know that we can make a profit on every share that we are obliged to take in this way. This is our second public offer to buy back all stock sold by us, at an advance of 1-2 cent a share.

Did ever another mining company make such an offer? We mean without attaching a string to it.

Never! Name it if you can. We might be glad to buy back within 30 days at 10c the stock you now buy at 4c. Things move fast in Nevada Gold King stock especially. Keep your eye on Nevada Gold King. Watch it soar. See it climb. Don't you want some of these quick profits, with a good chance of becoming part owner in one of the big mines of Nevada? Decide quick. Act. Last offer at 4c a share. It will never be so low again.

Handel's famous oratorio, "The Messiah," is to be rendered in Perkins hall on the evening of Thursday, April 25, upon a scale suited to the value of the greatest of musical masterpieces. Also, as a tribute to General Palmer, the oratorio will be repeated in the music room at "Glen Eyrie" upon the day following.

Musicians of both Colorado Springs and Denver are enlisted for the occasion, and the chorus will be composed of 70 voices. Henry Housley, of the Denver cathedral, will be at the organ. Those taking the leading roles will be: Miss Edith Collais, of the Twenty-third avenue Presbyterian church, Denver, soprano; Mrs. Kingsley Ballou, alto; J. Jaffe, tenor; J. M. Worthington, basso. A band of stringed instruments will furnish part of the accompaniment. Mr. Samuel Jessop, organist at St. Stephen's church, is director.

The list of patronesses includes the following prominent ladies of the city: Mrs. Sherwood Aldrich, Mrs. J. M. Bemis, Mrs. Kurnal R. Babbitt, Mrs. Alfred Carpenter, Mrs. Clarence P. Dodge, Mrs. Farnsworth, Mrs. Charles Fox Gardiner, Mrs. C. M. Hager, Mrs. W. Kennon Jewett, Miss Innes, Mrs. A. S. Littlefield, Mrs. Edward S. Parsons, Mrs. Spencer Penrose, Mrs. Frederick E. Monday evening Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Cox gave a delightful little dinner party in their North Nevada avenue home in compliment to Miss Grace Campbell and Dr. Homer C. Moses. The remainder of the guests were Dr. and Mrs. William A. Campbell, Dr. and Mrs. David H. Rice, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Raymond Lowell. Red carnations and asparagus plumosa were used in decorating the table.

Monday afternoon Miss Florence Pinckney informally entertained the members of the Sigia club, in compliment to Miss Grace Campbell. The principal decorations were of red hearts, and the bride-elect was presented with a pretty heart-shaped box containing the handkerchiefs provided for the "shower."

Engaged—Married

The marriage of Miss Ethel Barton Hawks, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sawyer Hawks of this city, to Mr. Joseph Warden Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Reid of Ottawa, Kan., was handsomely celebrated Wednesday evening in the Hawks residence, 420 N. Weber street. The Rev. Edgar W. Work, D. D., pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiated, at 7 o'clock, in the presence of a circle of the nearest relatives and friends.

The wedding party was grouped in a semicircle within the bay window of the reception hall, which was artistically candpied with a floral portiere of bride's roses and smilax and banked with tall palms and ferns. The bride was attended by the maid of honor, Miss Mary Strachan, and the groom's best man was Mr. Welf Felix of Ottawa, Kan. Little Miriam Perkins in a pretty white mull trimmed with valenciennes lace and pink ribbons, led the bridal procession, strewing rose petals. Miss Alice Linney was at the piano and rendered the wedding marches effectively.

An exquisite pure white crepe de chine of Empire design was worn by the fair bride. Quantities of renaissance lace entered into the garniture in the form of bands and medallions, and the bodice was set off with strappings of white velvet brushed with rosettes of velvet and pearls. A voluminous veil of sheerest tulle enveloped the bride's slender figure, and it was caught to the coiffure with sprays of natural orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of half open bride's roses and maidenhair ferns tied with chiffon ribbon.

Miss Strachan's gown was of white silk mull over pink taffeta and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses and maidenhair ferns tied with pink chiffon ribbon.

Madame Chatney roses in great clusters adorned the parlor, and the archways and mantels were festooned with smilax and asparagus plumosa. Roses, carnations and snapdragons banked the mantels and decorated the balustrades.

Beginning at 8:30 o'clock a large number of guests called to tender their congratulations to the bride and groom, who were stationed in the parlor with the parents of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Hawks, to the left, and the parents of the groom, Mr. and Mrs. Reid, to the right.

An umbrella canopy of smilax and enchantress carnations concealed the electoliers in the dining room, where the guests at the reception were invited to partake of an excellent course supper.

Late in the evening the bride donned her stylish going-away gown of tan and white striped panama cloth with a neapolitan plateau to compare, trimmed with golden brown chrysanthemums and ribbon, and the young couple departed for a bridal trip in the east. They will be at home after June 1, at 313 South Maple street, Ottawa, Kan.

Mrs. Reid will be greatly missed, not only in her home circle, but universally in the city, for she is a particularly accomplished and charming young woman and possessed of much refinement of character.

In his home city Mr. Reid is highly esteemed and prominent in banking circles, where he is associated with his father. He is a graduate of Yale university, and his college chum, Mr. Frederick G. Becker, of Chicago, Ill., was among the guests at the wedding.

Tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock Miss Grace Campbell, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William A. Campbell, will be married in their home, 424 North Nevada avenue, in the presence of about one hundred relatives and friends, to Dr. Homer C. Moses of this city, the Rev. Edgar W. Work, D. D., of the First Presbyterian church, officiating.

After about a fortnight's trip through the state, Dr. and Mrs. Moses will be at home to their friends at 424 North Nevada avenue.

Tuesday night, a number of the friends of the contracting parties witnessed a pretty wedding ceremony at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Bartholomew, Miss Opal Lapsley becoming the wife of the Rev. N. O. Bartholomew, of the Ohio Avenue Congregational church, Denver.

The Rev. A. W. Moore, of the Second Congregational church, officiated, and later the newly-wedded pair left on an eastern trip. After June 1 they will be at home at 958 South Washington street, Denver.

Formal and Informal

An interesting recital was given yesterday afternoon in the studio, 116 East Dale street, by Laura Jones, a piano pupil of Mrs. Maude Sanders Faust, and Ettie Shapiro, a violin pupil of Miss Josephine Trott.

The numbers rendered were:

Violin and Piano—
Sonata, D Major ..... Schubert
Allegro Molto.
Andante.
Allegro Vivace.

Piano—

An event of late date attracting a representative audience of Colorado Springs musically inclined people, was the concert last Monday evening in Perkins hall given by George W. Oles, who has received the title of "The American Violinist." Mr. Oles is one of the large number of musicians who are basking in the benign rays of the health-giving Colorado sunshine and gradually gaining strength to give expression to their chosen art.

In his repertoire, Mr. Oles includes the works of some of the renowned composers, and besides rendering some difficult selections he included his own compositions, "Mystery," and "Memories."

The piano accompaniments were by Mr. Orlas Williams, and Miss Josephine Comstock contributed two groups of songs to the admirably selected program.

The annual meeting of the Daughters of Vermont was held last Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Thomas C. Pease, 14 East Caramillo street. The time was mostly occupied with the election of officers for the ensuing year. Mrs. Charles A. Eldredge was re-elected president; Mrs. Charles E. Hamilton, vice president; Mrs. J. D. Nifong, secretary; Miss Mary E. Baker, treasurer.

The association then adjourned and no regular meetings will be held until in the fall. The usual annual picnic will take place on Memorial day.

The regular monthly meeting of the Hospital guild was held Wednesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. Wm. Lennox, 1901 North Nevada avenue, the president, Mrs. John Lennox, in the chair. Routine business was transacted and Miss Miller gave a recitation.

After an earnest discussion of plans for raising money for the new Protestant hospital, the meeting adjourned until Wednesday, May 8, when the meeting will be at the home of Mrs. John Lennox, 1901 North Nevada avenue.

The annual meeting of the Cemetery Aid association was held Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. James W. Atkinson, 2020 North Tejon street. Mrs. Atkinson was elected president of the association; Mrs. William H. Wells, vice president; Mrs. Newton S. Gandy, secretary, and Mrs. Mort Parsons, treasurer. Twelve new members were added to the association. Motion was unanimously carried that a life membership in the association be $25. Mrs. Roxie Brown, Mrs. Rush Kimball and Mrs. W. H. Wells constitute a committee to make arrangements for a benefit entertainment.

The association will place a drinking fountain in the cemetery in the near future. The committee to attend to the matter includes Mrs. James P. Barnes, chairman; Mrs. A. T. Cessford, Mrs. J. H. Thedinga and Mrs. Mort Parsons.

The Golden Sunshine Society met last Monday afternoon with Mrs. E. E. Ward, 1502 South Nevada avenue. The committee appointed reported that "The Spinsters' Convention," a facetious play, would be given under the auspices of the society in the Ivy-wild chapel the last week in April. All members of the cast are requested to meet for rehearsal next Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, in the home of Mrs. W. B. Jenkins, 1622 South Nevada avenue.

The next regular meeting of the society will be held Monday, April 22, at 2:30 p. m., with Mrs. E. A. Peifer, 14 Ramona avenue.

The Kit Carson circle, No. 9, Ladies of the G. A. R., observed "Appomattox day" last Tuesday in G. A. R. hall. An appropriate and interesting program was rendered and the occasion was a thoroughly enjoyable one.

The East side W. C. T. U. met with Mrs. E. Butner, Wednesday afternoon. The Rev. Edward H. Liles read an interesting paper on "Tobacco." A short parliamentary drill was given by the president, Mrs. Jencks, on "Forms of reports of committees and adoption of reports."

The union will hold a rummage sale Thursday, April 25, and contributions may be given to any member of the organization. The meeting this week will be held with the president, Mrs. Jencks, 627 North Weber street.

Influenza: A World Plague

Copyright 1907 by Ellery Sedgwick.

Each Year It Kills 7,000 Americans and Paves the Way for Diseases That Kill 20,000 More. How It Makes the Body Vulnerable to Pneumonia and Tuberculosis—Pfeiffer's Bacillus, the Minute Organism Which Produces the Disease—Spread of Epidemic From Central Asia to All Parts of World—Light Common Varieties of La Grippe.

La grippe or influenza is one of those diseases that every human being is bound to contract soon or late. There is only one way indeed to avoid it and that way consists of taking yourself in an air [illegible] of the North pole where no other human being has ever breathed the air. Everywhere else on earth the influenza germ is sure to get you. In the last ten years every man and woman in the United States has suffered from its disabling activity.

Influenza spreads and rages like the plague of old. It is infectious and contagious and it works quickly. Three or four days after its bacilli invade your air passages you are in bed and there if you are wise you will remain at least a week. When the disease strikes a community few or none escape. Experience shows that in America an epidemic always means the disabling illness of at least 40 per cent of the population. In many cities the sick list rises to 60 or 70 per cent. In a few it has got within a short distance of 100 per cent.

Just because it is so common Americans have fallen into the error of regarding influenza lightly. By the average layman in fact it is looked upon merely as a sort of exaggerated and persistent cold. But between an ordinary cold and la grippe a great gulf is fixed. The one is a local malady and as a rule it cures itself within a few days. The other to borrow a disused term is a zymotic disease—Therefore it is apparent that influenza demands serious consideration.

Before the great epidemic of 1889 medical men had very little definite knowledge of the cause and nature of la grippe. The disease had been epidemic from time to time for 800 years but inasmuch as it seemed in comparison to other plagues to be a very slight thing no heed was paid to it. But when in 1889 it invaded Europe by way of Russia and then spread to all parts of the earth bacteriologists and pathologists in a dozen countries began giving it close attention.

The result was the discovery of the minute organism which produces the malady. This discovery was made simultaneously by Pfeiffer a German and Kitasato a Japanese and since then the germ has borne the name of Pfeiffer's bacillus. It is one of the gay motes that dance along a sunbeam. Under the microscope it appears as a tiny thin rod usually straight and with somewhat rounded ends. It multiplies with a thousand times the rapidity of a rabbit. Introduce half a dozen influenza germs into your bronchi today and a week hence your body will be the abiding place of 100 000 000 000.

When a man has la grippe his air passages are fairly alive with bacilli and every time he expectorates or takes a long breath he exhales millions of them. Thus they get to the air and other persons in the same house breathe them into their lungs and get the disease too. When an epidemic is in progress in a large city the air of street cars and other places of public assemblage is [illegible] with bacilli. In brief it is next to impossible to avoid breathing them and so every one or practically every one has a mild or severe attack of la grippe.

When they enter the body through the nose or mouth the germs ordinarily take up lodgment in the intermediate air passages. There they multiply rapidly and begin to send forth their poisons. These poisons coursing through the blood become diffused and cripple all of the bodily organs. The result is that one feels tired and stupid that one's temperature rises [illegible] that pains and aches appear in all directions. A man with la grippe indeed is a man poisoned and sometimes the poison in his veins kills him.

When the big epidemic of 1889 first struck the United States the symptom of the disease were very much like those of a very severe cold in the head but in subsequent years new types appeared and today a great many varieties of influenza are recognized. Several years ago the nervous type was uppermost and there was a number of reports of insanity due to the disease. Another year the typhoid type appeared and still another time influenza approached the border line of [illegible] and acute gastritis. It is in fact a [illegible] protean malady and [illegible] is probably blamed [illegible] for crimes that should be charged up against some other disease.

The eight most common forms of influenza may be classified roughly as [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] produces [illegible] much like those of an ordinary [illegible] with severe [illegible] high fever. The [illegible] of the disease [illegible] its [illegible] is not very dangerous but it has a [illegible] tendency to pave the way for pneumonia and tuberculosis.

3. The typhoid type is frequently mistaken for the so called mild attack of typhoid fever. The fever usually subsides within a week and com[illegible] In genuine typhoid the period of illness is much longer and the condition of the patient very naturally is far more grave but all the same the two are frequently confused.

4. The pleurisy type is characterized by pains in the chest and stomach in addition to the ordinary symptoms. It is caused by the germs lodging in the pleura the membrane which incloses the lungs. This type of influenza while not very dangerous in itself is apt to cause serious complications.

5. The pneumonia type. In this the patient suffers from a real pneumonia with the difference that while in the common form of pneumonia the disturbances in the lungs are caused by a germ called the pneumococcus the disturbing factor of influenza pneumonia is Pfeiffer's bacillus. Inasmuch as pneumonia of any sort is a dangerous and intractable malady this form of la grippe is much to be dreaded.

6. The rheumatic type is characterized by the symptoms of rheumatic fever—a high temperature, swollen painful joints and general functional disturbances. The wrist knee elbow and shoulder are the joints most commonly affected. This form of the malady is caused by an invasion of the joints by the influenza germ.

7. The nervous type is a very severe one. It may lead to nothing worse than neuralgia and then again it may lead to abscess of the brain or meningitis. It is caused by the influenza germs invading the nerve tissues the spinal cord or the brain. Sometimes the symptoms are much like those of sciatica. At other times long continued delirium or insanity results.

8. The stomachic type is characterized by a general invasion of the digestive tract by the influenza germ. The first symptom is vomiting and this is often followed by acute pains in the abdomen diarrhoea and other disorders of the bowels. When the germ invades the organs used for the elimination of waste they are impeded and jaundice appears. When it stops off at the vermiform appendix the result is one of the multitudinous varieties of appendicitis.

There are other minor forms of the disease but those outlined above are the ones most often encountered. They will exhibit the fact that influenza is a malady to be taken seriously. Its germs make themselves at home in any vital organ and wherever they take up their residence they make trouble. When they are confined to the upper air passages the result is merely what seems to be an extraordinary bad cold but when they get into the lungs the stomach the liver the spinal cord the vermiform appendix or the brain the patient is very ill indeed.

But the chief danger of influenza lies not in its own direct effects but in the fact that it greatly weakens the body as a whole and opens the way for the entrance and rapid increase of organisms of other diseases. The influenza germ secretes a violent poison and this poison as has been stated produces all the customary symptoms of the disease. The blood has a hard time manufacturing enough antitoxin to counteract it and when the work is done and the patient is cured the blood in his veins is exhausted and vitiated. It is then that the pneumococcus comes in and causes pneumonia or the tubercle bacillus enters and produces tuberculosis.

To understand all of this better it may be well to call to mind certain facts regarding the human body's devices for fighting the germs of deadly diseases. Most of the work is done by the blood and its chief weapons are its leucocytes or white corpuscles. These white corpuscles have a great appetite for germs and under a high power microscope you can see them at work. The white corpuscles appear as transparent bags and the germs as little dark specks of various shapes. Through the walls of each corpuscle you can see three or four or a dozen dead germs inside. It eats a lot of them and if the germs are not too numerous and the white corpuscles are in good health every germ in the blood stream will be gobbled and destroyed.

But in some diseases the germs multiply with such astonishing rapidity under ordinary circumstances that the white corpuscles are soon gorged and can eat no more. Then the germs being completely free to do as they please generate their poisons in immense quantities. These poisons in their general effect are much like the poisons of bees snakes and spiders. They course through the blood and they cripple and injure every vital organ. Unless something is done to neutralize them they finally put one or more organs out of business altogether—and the patient dies.

Fortunately the blood even when the white corpuscles are unequal to the task of swallowing all of the live germs present in it still has a capacity for producing a sort of antidote for the germ poison. This antidote is called an antitoxin and its effect is to make the germ poison innocuous and non-poisonous. So long as a man's blood is able to produce enough antitoxin to neutralize the toxin or poison secreted by the influenza germs in his tissues and veins he is sure to get well.

But even when this is accomplished and the influenza patient begins to feel better it often happens that the severe work of producing a great amount of influenza antitoxin leaves the patient's blood exhausted. It is not only incapable of producing more influenza antitoxin but it is also incapable of producing any considerable amount of antitoxin to fight the toxins secreted by the germs of any other disease—pneumonia or tuberculosis for instance. That is why when a man is recovering from influenza he is peculiarly susceptible to pneumonia and tuberculosis. If the germs of either of these diseases get into the lungs, he is unable to combat them, and so they make themselves at home and begin to destroy his tissues.

All of this proves that influenza is a malady of a very serious sort—particularly in its after affects. Therefore a person who [illegible] should get a good doctor and follow his directions explicitly. After convalescence something should be done to invigorate and strengthen the body and give back to the blood its lost richness and its lost skill at fighting germs. The best way to accomplish these things is to take a couple of weeks holiday with a change of air if possible and to eat plenty of nourishing wholesome food and stay in the open.

People who object to going to bed when they have la grippe and insist, as soon as they are well enough to stand, upon going back to work are apt to take pneumonia or even tuberculosis. A high authority estimates that 20 per cent of the tuberculosis in America today is the result of neglected cases of influenza. Thus it is apparent that while la grippe itself kills but 7 000 Americans a year it probably paves the way for the death of a great many more.

Efforts are being made to produce an artificial antitoxin to aid the antitoxin of the blood in their fight against the toxin or poison secreted by the influenza germ. In a few years no doubt this antitoxin will be in common use just as the diphtheria antitoxin is today. In addition bacteriologists are trying to perfect a vaccine capable of protecting human beings against influenza infection. The familiar smallpox vaccine has robbed smallpox of its old terrors and some day let us hope, influenza will cease to afflict us too.

Meanwhile there is no specific remedy for influenza and all the physician can do is to keep the body of the patient as vigorous as possible and try to counteract the effects of some of the symptoms such for instance as fever. Good feeding and proper nursing are essential particularly in the nervous delirium and fits of temporary insanity. Warm baths and hot drinks aid in the cure and ice packs on the head reduce the fever.

Influenza sufferers are usually much depressed and so it is well to make some effort to restore their good humor. But it is dangerous to attempt this by trying to convince them that they are not seriously ill. Beyond everything else they should be induced to remain in bed. The patient who gets out a day too soon may easily pay for his impatience with his life.

Mistaken Appearances

We want to call attention to the fact that a great many people allow themselves to be deceived or rather perhaps mistaken as to their true condition. Those who are in the early stages of Tuberculosis often make rapid improvement after coming to this climate. They perhaps lose their cough, or almost all of it they lose quite or nearly all of their expectoration they gain flesh and seem very well. They think they never cough and never expectorate. They feel so well that they are really not [illegible] to [illegible] facts because perhaps if they were questioned closely in regard to it they would remember that in the morning they coughed a little and had a little expectoration and are really mistaken as to their true condition because they feel so well. The dry bracing air is stimulating and if their heart is alright they feel as though they could walk to the top of Pike's Peak every day and enjoy it.

Now comes the trouble. They have business at home that demands their attention, or they have a family at home that they need to be with or they feel as though they could not bare the expense of remaining here any longer. So they go home and about 90 cases out of 100 they begin to lose ground after a few months perhaps inside of a month they see a change. They stay there just as long as they can thinking they will be well or better next week but after a while they have to come back here again and then another trouble occurs, which is that they do not feel the influence of the climate as they did the first time they came here and they can not understand why they do not get well as fast as they did the first time, so they stay on and on and the disease gradually develops until finally they go home to finish up their lives.

We never have had in our ten years experience in this climate, such an experience as this with anyone who took the Shepard Treatment according to directions. Those that feel that they are well and can go home just as well as not and have by some means become acquainted with this treatment take for one or two months here and then take it home with them continuing the treatment there for a few months until all traces of the disease have left them then they are cured and well and can remain in their homes and attend to their business as they did before they came here.

A good many people have come to us who have thought themselves well, and had gone home to return again to this climate for the second time. In those cases it takes a great deal longer to control the disease and bring about an improvement, but in the majority of such cases, if they come early enough it can be done and then they can return to their homes without any fear of the disease returning again.

Anyone visiting our offices will see patients there during any time in the day who have gone through or are going through the above experience. We are very glad to have people come and see patients and investigate the matter thoroughly, and if they would like take the examination without any cost to themselves or any inconvenience or trouble on our part for this treatment certainly opens to anyone who has tuberculosis either a cure in all of those case where the lungs are not too seriously destroyed or a marked improvement in those cases that have gone too far. Our offices are in the Barnes Building, where examination and consultation will be given free. Office hours from 10 to 12 a. m. and from 2 to 4 p. m.

AMERICANS GETTING BIGGER

During Past Century He Has Grown Taller and Stronger

From the Chicago Chronicle

A tailor whose firm has been continuously in business in Philadelphia for 105 years has compiled from his books of measurement some statistics that discount the statements of pessimists.

These statistics show that the American in the past century has grown taller stronger and slimmer—greater in height and in chest girth less in the girth of waist and hips.

The average chest of 1805 was 36 inches. It is 38 inches now. The average height was 5 feet 7 inches. It is now 5 feet 8½ inches. The length of leg has increased in the same proportion. The shoulders and chest have greatly developed. The waist on the other hand has lost two inches.

HOW TO KEEP CIGARS FRESH

Various Devices to Keep Their Moisture From Evaporating

From the Kansas City Star

Yes sir cigars require care to keep them fresh said a wholesale cigar dealer yesterday. If good are kept in warehouses where there is heat they are bound to dry out more or less although they may be sealed virtually air tight in the individual boxes. Steam heat is the hardest on cigars. If left exposed at all they dry out very quickly and lose much of their flavor. In the big warehouses where large quantities of cigars are stored the jobber have humidors installed. They are simply water containers of one style or another arranged so that the water is open to the air for evaporation. The presence of the water prevents the air from getting too dry for the cigars. Even in the big showcases in the jobbers salesrooms the same precaution is taken to prevent the stock from drying out. Moisteners made by placing water soaked pads in tin lined wooden boxes are placed in the compartments with the boxes of cigars. The careful retailer is just as particular with his cigars and keeps a soaked sponge or some sort of moistener in his showcases with his goods.

A brick thoroughly water soaked is good to put into a showcase with cigars. The brick is so porous that it will soak up nearly its own bulk in water. When a soaked brick is placed in a showcase the water within it evaporates slowly just enough to keep the cigars soft.

"If cigars are packed in good tight boxes they will retain their flavor. And the flavor of good cigars comes from the tobacco alone. It is a mistake to think that anything else is used to enhance or qualify the flavor of first-class tobaccos. It's only the poorer cigars that are doctored.

"How? Well with drugs or chemicals. The poor qualities of tobacco used in making cheap cigars haven't much flavor so very often the manufacturers provide an artificial flavor with various drugs. They treat them so they give forth the odor of good tobacco too. If you're a smoker you've probably picked up an inexpensive cigar that smelled as if it were made from the best of tobacco—When you smoked it you found it contained short filler and sadly lacked the smoking qualities of a cigar made from good tobacco. That was a doctored cigar. Often cheap cigars look as if they had a glaze on the wrapper and when placed in the mouth the smoker detects a sweetish flavor. These are evidences of drugs. As far as I ever heard the drugs used are all perfectly harmless.

Nearly all cheap cigars are made of short filler that is the inside of the cigars is composed of broken bits of tobacco leaves. Only the wrapper and binder are of large perfect leaves. In the cheap grades of Spanish and Cuban made cigars there is no binder. The small bits are simply inclosed in the single outside wrapper.

Somehow we have lost sight of the war in Central America since Harriman and Roosevelt got to scrapping. By the way, is the mule dead?

ALCOHOL AS A BY PRODUCT

More Economical Than Kerosene for Heating and Lighting

From Appleton Magazine

Ask the western or eastern farmer and he will tell you that 5 bushels is not an unusual crop of potatoes [illegible] many of the [illegible] potato patches. This quantity will furnish fully 50 gallons of alcohol. The country's potato harvest reaches in an average year 250,000,000 bushels. A bushel of ordinary field corn such as is grown on the 160-acre and 1,000-acre fields of Kansas Missouri and Iowa will yield five gallons of spirits by modern distillation. Allowing but four gallons to the bushel for the sake of argument the national crop of this great cereal would produce the enormous quantity of 10,000,000,000 gallons alone.

Will we call the raising of sugar beets one of our infant industries and have only begun their cultivation we have the waste product of 300,000 [illegible] of raw material for our spirits. The cane fields of Louisiana alone would contribute every drop of alcohol needed in the south land for light power and other purposes.

Good When Crops Are Big

Of course it is preposterous to suppose that all of our potatoes or corn or any other staple will be converted into alcohol but in a big crop year when corn for example goes begging at 30 or 35 cents a bushel there is an opportunity to turn it into something which will make it worth, perhaps double its value in the original form.

There will be no need of burning it in the stove because it is cheaper than buying coal as has been done many times on the prairie. The manufacture of alcohol thus creates a new source of consumption for some of our leading surplus crops which should be a valve of the utmost importance in regulating production and in maintaining prices.

Yes the [illegible] seem incredible for the reason that we have considered alcohol as a rare a costly commodity. But before congress decided upon its release from bondage committees obtained convincing testimony that the spirit is not merely one of the most useful servants of humanity but one of the most easily obtained.

Cheaper Than Kerosene

We remember that the farmer lighted his home with spirit lamps. Why did he go to kerosene oil? Because the spirit gave him more illumination for less money. In recent years the gas mantle has become popular because of the light it affords [illegible] man discovered that the mantle can be utilized with an alcohol burner. A gallon of [illegible] is sufficient to keep it burning 14[illegible] hours supposing that each hour it furnished a light equal to that of one candle.

A modern lamp burning the highest grade of kerosene oil requires one gallon to burn 750 candle power hours as the expert terms it. Therefore a gallon of spirit will furnish nearly twice as much illumination as kerosene. In fact if it sold at 4 cents a gallon it would be more economical to use than kerosene at 15 cents a gallon.

CANCER "CURES"

From the British Medical Journal

In the bright lexicon of cancer cures there's no such word as fail—at any rate if we are to believe their inventors.

RULES TO FOLLOW NOWADAYS

Simple Hygienic Memoranda for the Public and Domestic Guidance.

From Harper's Weekly

After the repeated shocks which have been dealt to the nerves of the public at large the following few simple hygienic memoranda have been carefully prepared for the public and domestic guidance.

On rising in the morning—Rule First—Don't wash or take a bath unless you are sure the water has been properly distilled treated with barium chloride and permanganate of potassium and redistilled over K. H. S. O4 to fix any ammonia. If the housekeeper does not possess this elementary chemical knowledge decline to wash at all and take an air bath.

Second—Use a new toothbrush or else have a fresh set of false teeth each day—whichever you think less dangerous.

Third—Do your hair with your fingers brushes and combs are deadly bacillus traps.

Fourth—Keep your soap sponge and shaving material under an air pump to choke off the microbes.

Fifth—If impossible to follow above rules stay in bed.

At the Breakfast Table—Rule First—Don't read the morning paper or open letters until they have been baked saturated with a disinfectant, and put through the mangle. The postal officials are most careless with mail.

Second—All bills should be promptly sent into unlimited quarantine.

Third—Refrain from eating any bacon, fish kidneys etc over which an inquest has not been held or eggs that have not been sat upon by a coroner's jury.

Fourth—Keep your mouth closed throughout the meal.

On Going to Business—Rule First—Refuse all change that may be offered you by street car conductor etc. If you do not care to lose such sums insist on having newly minted coins handed you wrapped up in sterilized cotton.

Second—If you are compelled to go to a refreshment stand take your own filter glassware and crockery with you also assorted repartees to any comments made by the barkeeper.

Third—Stay if possible at home.

Before Lunching at a Cafe—Rule First—Demand an interview with the proprietor and inquire if he has a clean bill of health.

Second—Request to be shown over the kitchen (using of course an aseptic respirator) and satisfy yourself that nothing not fresh is to be found in the establishment.

Third—Having thus filled up the luncheon hour if necessary at various restaurants postpone your repast until you return to your aseptic dinner table by which time you will have lost such appetite as you may have had.

On Taking a Holiday—Rule First—See that the district you select is thoroughly deodorized deterged and denuded of germs before your arrival.

Second—Travel thither by balloon having previously sent your obituary notice to the papers and town officials.

Third—Drop into the sea or the nearest body of water.

Final—If after following the above rules, you should contract any germ disease, consider yourself an unlucky dog.

THE PATCH AS A GUIDE.

From Success Magazine

A New Englander recently had occasion to engage a gardener. One morning two applicants appeared—one a decidedly decent-looking man and the other of much less prepossessing appearance and manner.

After very little hesitation the man of the house chose the latter applicant.

A friend who was present evinced surprise at the selection, asking:

"Has that man ever worked for you before?"

"No," replied the other, "in fact, I never saw either of them before today."

"Then why did you choose the shorter man? The other had a much better face."

"Face!" exclaimed the proprietor of the place in disgust. "Let me tell you that when you pick out a gardener you want to go by his overalls. If they're patched on the knees you want him. If the patch is on the seat of the trousers, you don't."

CHANGING COLOR OF CANARIES.

Orange colored canaries are becoming more and more popular. The process to turn a canary's feathers orange is a simple one. With its food is mixed a small quantity of cayenne pepper and in a few weeks or months the feathers change color. If the pepper is given to the bird when it is young a more vivid color will be obtained.

The Draining of the Everglades

Florida Defeats a Scheme of Reclamation

But This Action Was Largely Due to Political Intrigue and the Fear of a Ring---Henry M. Flagler Interested in Beating the Proposition---Undoubtedly the Idea Will Yet Win---Changes in the Everglades in Recent Years.

W. F. ... in the Boston Evening Transcript.

IT is the Florida ambition that the Everglades be drained. That region of morass and lake and half submerged wilderness which embraces the lower third of the peninsula has long been looked upon from all quarters of the state as a reserve territory whose great acreage can and will some day be reclaimed and brought within the habitable domain of Florida. The state already has dry land enough and to spare, if properly employed, to sustain five times its present population—a population not less than that of the city of Boston and scattered over next to the largest state east of the Mississippi river. Nevertheless, Floridians are not satisfied. Southerners are wont to be ambitious where great projects are involved, though shirking small and inconspicuous responsibilities. It is a part of their make-up. Thus while there is hardly a landowner in the state but has many waste acres on his own farm which might be reclaimed and brought under cultivation, and many farmers are paying taxes on more land than is profitable, in short, are "land poor," yet the cry is always for more territory.

So the people of the state and especially the far seeing politicians have long had an eye to the possibilities of the Everglades. Their motives have perhaps been of two sorts. Some saw in the reclamation of that vast wilderness the great Florida opportunity to gain reputation, while others may have seen in the project a chance to exploit it for purely personal advantage. The writer is not prepared to say that any particular public man in Florida held the latter motive, but the charge has been made freely by newspapers and public speakers in that state.

It was mainly the distrust of what certain leading men would do ... with the uncertainty as to who really owned a large share of the submerged lands that caused the overwhelming defeat at the recent election of the proposed amendment to the constitution which provided for the creation of a permanent board of reclamation for any or all waste lands in the state, the board to consist of the governor, comptroller, state treasurer, attorney general and commissioner of agriculture, and to be perpetuated by their successors in office.

Granted that there is a widespread demand in Florida for the reclamation of the Everglades, notwithstanding the defeat of the amendment, what is the situation confronting the people with respect to carrying out the plan? The facts are briefly these: In 1850 congress gave to ... states, Florida among them, tracts of swamp and waste lands within their respective borders. The transfer was ... simple with no restrictions. Most states sold off the lands and converted the proceeds into the general fund. Florida, however, entrusted the lands to a permanent board which loaded the trust with debt. Much of the Everglades land was finally sold by auction, Hamilton Disston being a large purchaser. The proceeds were given to the railroads as an inducement to build, and as a result over two thousand miles of railroad were built in Florida. Disston drained parts of the Everglades, spending a large amount of money. He built cane mill and tried sugar raising on a grand scale. His project proved a failure. Lands that he redeemed at enormous cost are now offered for sale at $1 per acre and find no purchaser at that figure. This fact knocks some of the enthusiasm out of the claim advanced by Governor Broward that the reclaimed Everglades land ... very productive and will sell for $30 per acre, thus giving the state an enormous profit on its investment.

The plan by which it was proposed the reclamation board should ... was suspicious in the large powers it conferred on the executive heads of the state who composed the board. They were to have unlimited power to expend money raised by their own tax levies on lands drained and on the corporations directly profiting. The sum contemplated was something like $,000 a year, to be continued indefinitely. There was to be no requirement of bonds from the members of the board, which was not amenable to any one, not even the state legislature. Such was the scheme of Governor Broward and his fellows and it appears to be no wonder that the voters refused to build up a machine in the state which bade fair to be an incubus and might be corrupt.

If the state's title to the Everglade lands had not been in dispute the scheme might have received larger support than it did receive. But added to the fear of creating a political ring with almost unlimited powers was the uncertainty as to who really owned a large part of the lands. The Louisville & Nashville railroad claims 1,500,000 acres of swamp and waste land and the Atlantic Coast line 1,000,000 acres. The land was granted the roads for projecting their lines; that is, the legal process was gone through which conferred title on the railroads. But subsequent authority denies that the railroads are entitled to the property. Suits are now pending to determine the titles.

It was this condition that gave color to the claim of certain leading newspapers of Florida that the governor and his fellows are working in the interest of the railroads mentioned. The people decided to curb their desire to make a sub-tropical paradise of the southern wilderness until it could be fairly ... [illegible]

Mr. Flagler Omnipotent

There is a peculiar condition in Florida that makes for division and factional strife in the state. The east coast of the state is dominated by one man who owns a railroad and several fine hotels, and that man is Henry M. Flagler. He is a Standard Oil magnate and a Republican. It is said that he has the naming of at least one of the Democratic United States senators and two of the three Democratic congressmen of the state. He is also said to control the most influential newspaper in the state, which never fails to laud Mr. Flagler, though its Democratic editors usually revile Republicans and trusts. The East Coast railway, Mr. Flagler's road, got no land grants from the state. Possibly Mr. Flagler's newspaper championing of the anti-drainage amendment ... came from that circumstance. It ... was largely responsible for the overthrow of the scheme.

It is generally conceded in Florida that the plan has been merely put off until the suits over the land have been adjudicated, and until a new amendment can be drafted which will meet with more general popular approval. Despite the prevailing enthusiasm for the plan, even in view of the disastrous outcome of the Disston experiment, the Everglades must some time be drained. There is, however, some opposition to the general plan. Fruit growers whose orchards are near the Everglades fear that if the water is drained off the climate will be made much colder and frosts will become prevalent. They cite instances of similar reclamation work in other places which have had this effect.

It is a stupendous undertaking for a state with only 500,000 population and without exceptional financial resources. But the people see great undertakings being carried forward within their borders backed by northern millions, like the building of the railroad across the keys and over the very ocean to Key West, and do not like to think the combined people of a sovereign state cannot do as much.

Needed for Orange Land

Undoubtedly the Everglades ... Frost ... moving further south ... decade ... owing largely to the ... of the subtropical part of Florida, so that whereas oranges were grown in the very northwestern part of the state up to 20 years ago, now their culture is carried on with safety only below the middle of the peninsula. The reclamation of the Everglades will indeed almost double the citrus fruit growing region of the state, and will give opportunity for the extension of the growing of the ... which by reason of the freeze ... years ago had ... in northern markets.

Despite the fact that the ... of the property is in litigation ... trustees of the internal improvement fund, the present ... officials ... were stated ... drainage board ... land to be ... and ... finding ... with which to dig the ... and drains necessary ... tion of the lands. The trustees' reports show that several lines of levels have been run and soundings taken to determine the character of the material. ... For this purpose the ... derived from ... sale of swamp lands in their ... Without ... would be invested ... taxing ... the present trustees ... about $1,000, whereas the sum contemplated as the result of the ... and the tax ... were empowered ... about $,000 annually ... [illegible]

... and drain much of the surrounding lands sufficient for cultivation. It is stated on good authority that the fall of the ... river, which drains a basin ... miles in length, is hardly more than that of a canal which might be built from Lake Okechobee to the ocean or the gulf, a distance of from 25 to 60 miles. Indeed, profiles of engineers show that the elevation of Lake Munroe, one of the wide places in the St. Johns and 203 miles from its mouth, is but four feet and one inch above tide water and that Lake Helen Blazes, the source of the river, a distance of 301 miles up the river, is but 23 feet above the ocean. Therefore the drainage board advocates ask, why is it not practicable to drain an area 21 feet above the ocean level at a distance of but a score of miles from salt water?

But the great difficulty lies in the fact that Lake Okechobee is ... surrounded by a slight elevation of coral ... stone, is perhaps the relic of a lagoon in the midst of what was once a coral reef, and the lands lying between it and the sea are lower than the lake, being at a general level of but ten and a half feet above the ocean and the gulf.

While doubtless the Everglade basin has been to a large extent filled up by the enormous vegetable growth, the drainage by the various streams whose heads or rapids are gradually working farther into the body of the glades has had much to do with this apparent filling up. The evidence is that the drainage has had ... effect on the apparent altitude of the surface that ... filling up.

Large areas ... square miles, which but a few years ago were ... over ... with saw grass and ... down ... except during the rainy months. The fall ... of all streams running from the glades have evidently receded toward the center of the glades and Lake Okechobee several miles since the report quoted was made.

Possible Outlets of the Lake

Three possible outlets of the lake have been advocated by the governor and his colleagues. One is by way of the Caloosahatchee river, possibly by means of a short canal from Okechobee to the headwaters of that stream and a deep dredging of the river itself a distance of 60 miles to the gulf; another course eastward to the Atlantic 53 miles to New river, which is the plan most in favor; and the third, by the nearest route to Atlantic tidewater, 22 miles, which, however, though the shortest route of the three, is the most difficult because it would require a large amount of excavation owing to the fact that it passes through high and rocky land. While citrus fruits, it is claimed, will grow to perfection on these reclaimed lowlands, the great boon that presents itself to the minds of advocates of draining is the possibilities opened up for the growth of sugar cane. Governor Broward in a pamphlet makes the statement that to supply the demand for sugar in the United States requires two million eight hundred thousand tons per annum. The total amount of sugar produced in the country is four hundred thousand tons. There is imported into the United States two million four hundred thousand tons. He makes the claim that Florida has sugar lands in the Everglades enough to produce this quantity twice over. Despite the disappointing experiments of the Disston company already referred to, he produces reports of eminent chemists which, if broadly applicable to large stretches of land, as examples of what the lands will produce are truly amazing. But doubtless allowance is to be made for the ... much of theory which scientific tests are wont to contain. One test showed the yield to be over sixty-three tons of cane to the acre which, yielding two hundred pounds of sugar to a ton, or ... twelve thousand six hundred pounds of sugar to the acre, figures up a very pretty sum total for the whole of the Everglade wastes, and it is doubtless on calculations of this sort that Governor Broward bases his extraordinary claim.

But making allowance for the characteristic southern sanguine temperament it must be conceded that while much of the Everglade lands, even after being relieved of surplus water, would still be waste because of rocky ... that would be ... bare or sandy uplands that would have no soil upon them, there would be large areas whereon pineapples, oranges, grape fruit and other citrus fruit, besides ... cotton and corn could be grown at good profits. To be sure, a much larger area along the Mississippi river in Louisiana has been drained and made the most valuable portion of that state.

Troublesome Treaty With Indians

There is one feature of the case that was considered but slightly in the recent campaign for drainage in Florida. That is the treaty which the United States government made in 1845 with the Seminole Indians, who had been very troublesome to the settlers of the northern part of the state. The treaty set apart a large portion of the southern end of the state, boundaries undefined, for the occupancy of the Indians and guaranteed that they could remain there in peaceful possession providing they lived peacefully. The lands are nearly all state lands now, but the government still holds 200,000 acres. So that should the Everglades be drained another chapter of confiscation of Indian lands would be written. But since the number of surviving Indians occupying these swampy fastnesses is small, not much consideration and perhaps little sentiment need be given to the matter. A phase of the situation which has been overlooked by the promoters of the enterprise is the possibility of government aid being invoked to drain, or at least help drain, the Everglades. An appropriation has been made by congress for drainage investigations and Florida might avail herself of that aid as a step in her cherished project. She does not choose to invoke outside help, however, preferring to go it alone. It is the south's way, leading sometimes into difficulties hitherto unforeseen, but often evidencing a pluck and enthusiasm which has accomplished results which calmer judgment might have failed to achieve. But in view of the peculiar status of the matter the people of the state have doubtless done wisely in postponing action on the large scale set forth in the proposed amendment. First, because the titles to the lands are not settled, second, because the drainage board would have been vested with too great powers, and third, because insufficient investigation of the lands has been made and inflated estimates of values and profits have been set up to counterbalance the formidable costs that must necessarily attend the work.

Better Discipline But Less Friendship Since Hazing Was Stopped at Annapolis

Some Merits in Old System Which Cannot Be Found Under New Regime.

Annapolis Correspondence Washington Post.

"ALL this is done away with now," exclaimed a midshipman when the subject of hazing and running the plebes at the United States Naval academy was brought up in the course of conversation.

The statement is practically true. The so-called honor code ... with the hazing was ... has been abolished. A new code regulates the relations of the plebes and the upper class men.

This is the result of the Meriwether-Branch court martial and the various investigations accompanying it. It is due largely to the midshipmen themselves. They were ... for ... to act.

With few exceptions all the upper class men had been guilty of hazing, and if congress and the navy department had pursued their investigations to the bitter end half the first, second and third classes would have been dismissed from the navy. As it was, when the dozen dismissals by court martial were made, the ... were ... down to ... than 200 midshipmen ... those dismissed were punished more or less severely for having been active hazers of the plebes.

A year has elapsed since the fight which ended in the death of one of the participants and ... the country the conditions existing at the naval academy. The new dispensation has had a trial ... no longer are ... maltreated or molested. They are at liberty to turn corners squarely, sit as they please when at mess and do many other things once forbidden.

The first step toward this end was taken by the first class, the class of 1906, then about to graduate. The president of the class, ... Grady, on January 8, 1906, wrote a letter to the superintendent, suggesting in substance that the midshipmen would stop hazing if the authorities would stop dismissing those midshipmen who had been engaged in hazing. Admiral James H. Sands, superintendent, refused to take such a proposition into consideration.

Senior Class Dictates Law.

The class of 1906 was graduated and left matters unchanged. Then the class of 1907 passed the following resolution on February 18, 1906: "It should be ... the senior class always dictates the laws, customs and usages that govern the midshipmen in their conduct toward one another.

"In deference to the wish of congress and the will of the people of the United States and with the belief that our action will minister to good discipline, law and order, but without apology for a system that has been supported in good faith and in the main with good intentions, we, the class of 1907,

"Resolve to abolish at the United States Naval academy absolutely and without reservation hazing, class fighting, running, fagging and all similar practices."

What has been effected by the change? How do the midshipmen regard it? The answer made to the question by Midshipman Churchill Humphrey, president of the first class, was:

"The ... has departed. The change is infinitely better than the old system. The midshipmen now are far happier."

This view is taken by many ... corps. Yet there is some dissent. A member of the first class said:

"The present system is not as favorably received as the old code. The classes are now wider apart than they used to be."

Another member of the same class, of athletic standing, said that it could not be doubted that the present policy had improved the discipline of the academy though it had not increased the friendship between the several classes. Under the former system an upper class man had certain privileges, for instance, when late at formation he was not reported. Now everything to the utmost limit is reported and of course no friendships can be formed such as were once created by the consideration shown the upper class men in such matters by their superiors.

Midshipman Archibald H. Douglass, president of the second class, said:

Present System Separates Classes

"The present system has not drawn the classes closer together. While I would not say how it is as to the third and fourth classes, certainly the fourth class is farther away from the first and second classes.

"There are few troubles now, the place is too big and too many are here and the midshipmen do not come together so much under the present system as they used to under the old. Fourth class men seem to have lost the respect they used to have for the first and upper class men. Those old customs made friends.

"When I was a plebe I had for six weeks in a stretch to wake up an upper class man. I hated the very thought of it, but when I went through it all I was ... and ... same good friends."

A number of the second class said that the present system has widened the breach between the four classes. Formerly when a midshipman hazed an under class man they got to know each other, and when the class below was promoted the hazer and the hazed became friends. Now they do not come together.

A leader in scholarship in the second class said that it showed that the old system had some merit, and ... number of the rules that the system had inaugurated had been made regulations of the Naval academy. He believed that the old code had originated from wise considerations. It had, however, got into the hands of extremists and had been carried to its downfall.

"He could not have believed until he saw it that the wonderful change that had been wrought in the discipline of the Naval academy could have been made. The discipline here is now much superior to what it was, but it does not create friendship as formerly.

"So far as hazing is concerned," he added, "I am glad that I went through it and yet I would not want anybody else to endure it. I believe that the code was a good part of the education ... system of the academy. It helped to make the new men understand that they were to obey their superiors and this was taught them sooner under the code than without it. The rates that were allowed under the code gave great spirit to the first class men."

Midshipman R. H. Davis, president of the third class, said:

Old System Made Many Friends

"The present system has the tendency to keep the third and fourth classes from becoming acquainted with each other and making friends, unless they were friends before they entered the academy. By the old system many friends were made. A man now dare not speak to a plebe lest it be taken for hazing.

"The fourth class as a body seem to ... right ... until ... they ... There is now absolutely no hazing or running. I believe most of the midshipmen like it the old way. There is a great difference in the conduct of a midshipman ... and ... the conduct of the fourth class toward the upper class men, there being ... under the old code system."

Another member of the third class said:

"The first, second and third classes all preferred the old system to the new. When in the old days a man had been hazed he thought he had got into the navy and deserved something. The breach between the classes are greater than ever."

Some members of the fourth class prefer the old system to the new. One of the latter explained his sentiment in this way:

"Under the old code men were turned out. The old system rooted out the mean element from the classes. The present system has removed the fourth class far from the touch of the other classes and there is no such thing as friendship between it and the other class."

Some of the youngsters, third class men who were themselves last year plebes, have tried to run the new midshipmen, but the loyalty of the first class to the authorities prevented the continuation of the system for the present year and the stand that the second class has taken in supporting the first class promises well for the future.

Puts Youngsters on Oath

In the last case of running the first class men were so indignant that they wanted the offender dismissed.

The first class has also debated in class meeting whether they should tell the plebes to resist hazing physically. This the class decided finally not to do. One device that has helped to bring about the present situation was the invention of Admiral Sands. He keeps in ... board ... of several officers and ... for fourth class men ... putting them on oath ... asks them ... questions as if they have been run or hazed or if they know of anybody that has been.

When third class youngsters or third class men returned here in the latter part of ... the plebes ... They had ... scheme ... from ...

A ... that a youngster would go to the closed door of a plebe's room and give the order "Attention! Face to the wall!" This order being obeyed, the judge walked into the room and gave this sentence: "He desires ... Stand in your ... sing ... sir."

The ... did as he was ordered. Under the code the plebe must neither look at his tormentor nor disobey his orders.

For several days this sort of thing went on. Then the youngsters found that the grand jury of the Naval Academy would soon be in session and as if by magic the performance ceased. Some sporadic cases have occurred since, but the hazing has been done with extreme care and caution and only things that savor of practical jokes were employed to teach the plebe his place. All the former vigor of the third class in hazing has disappeared.

Penalties Very Severe

One scheme was to summon a squad of plebes to quarters with an audience of youngsters. One youngster would give an order like this: "No. 1 recite an address in French and No. 2 and 3 applaud." Order second from the youngster: "No. 2 recite a speech in French, Nos. 1 and 3 applaud." Third order: "No. 3 write an oration in French, Nos. 1 and 2 applaud the orator." This being accomplished the performance ended.

One of the local poets discloses another kind of hazing:

Walk into my cutter, said the youngster to the plebe.
It dan... the waves ... the glide
The plebe ... took the cue and landed in the boat
And worked a round of stunts while in the boat afloat.

But the penalty for even mild hazing is severe. A youngster asked a plebe his name and was told it was Godfrey Chevalier.

"Hereafter," replied the youngster, "your name will be God Forsaken Chevalier."

Having been overheard by a first class man the ... was reported to the authorities and the ... received ... demerits ... when ... will cause his ...

The authorities agree that the discipline of the Naval Academy has been very greatly improved.

PHOTOGRAPHS WIN SUITS

From the Chicago Chronicle.

The modern photographer has queer jobs to perform sometimes. Time was when a photographer was simply a man who sat in his "gallery" and waited for people to come and have their pictures taken, but now the ... is one of civilization and the assignment photographer is one of the products of the times.

Making photographs to be used as evidence in divorce cases furnishes a good source of revenue to some photographers. A New York broker in Wall Street once came upon a letter addressed to his wife written in language whose warmth could scarcely be misunderstood and signed with another man's name. He took the letter to a photographer who reproduced the pages with the writing distinctly showing. The husband then replaced the letter in exactly the position that he found it, but said nothing to his wife. He bided his time and brought suit for divorce. The wife was defiant until the husband produced the photograph of the damaging note.

A woman recently had a photographer take 300 love letters. When the job was finished she bought the negatives from which the prints had been made and destroyed them in the photographer's presence. The photographer asked no questions.

Photographs which are to be used as evidence of injury in damage suits are comparatively common. A photographer's wife and small daughter were crossing Broadway one ... when they were knocked down by a ... office cart which had been struck by a street car. They were not seriously hurt, but they had been thrown down in the mud and the summer dresses which ... were wearing were ruined. ... husband's studio was near by and they hurried thither as the ... place of refuge.

As soon as the circumstance was explained the husband and father posed them in such a manner as would show up the mud with which they were plastered to the best advantage. The photographs were then presented to the street railway company, which readily accepted them as evidence of damage and liberally paid for the dresses ruined.

Society women are the best sources for queer and unusual photographs. Several of them are quite fond of having their collections of jewels taken. A woman ... to have her portrait taken. To his amazement when she lifted her veil he saw that her face was covered with spots and scars. He rather wondered at her desire to have pictured such a face as this until he learned that her photograph was to be used as evidence in a suit against a beauty specialist who had treated her.

One of the hardest jobs one ... had, according to one camera expert, was given him by a ... pretty matron of more than ample proportions who wanted a photograph of herself made for her son who was out west and had not seen her for some years. She ... requested that her ample figure should be trimmed down to graceful girlish lines and that her face should be ... represented without a wrinkle. It gave the photographer ... days of hard work ... but at last he succeeded in taking the picture ... with ... semblance to the original. But the plethoric old dame was immensely pleased and went away secure in the belief that her son would be too.

Sometimes an order that a camera ... gets suggests a whole life story. One photographer tells a story of being sent for to go to a certain man's home. On reaching the room he found a theatrical costume ... making ... his costume ... transformation completed ... he had himself photographed six times in his own garb ... and ... had the finished prints to be sent to an address in another town. Half an hour after the pictures had been returned to his office he learned that his customer had just committed suicide.

If you have made up your mind not to criticise, you have to remember to watch yourself mightily closely.

Remarkable Though Small

From the Pittsburg Dispatch.

"Buster" Gabriel, now outgrown by years but not ... the juvenile title of "master," was born June 19, 1883, in the city of New York. He weighed exactly 15 ounces and commenced to notice things immediately. When 4 years of age he could read, write and talk as well as the average child of 10. It was about this time that the Gabriel family moved to Wickford, R. I., and there the youngster was sent to the public school. A special desk and chair had to be provided for him and in every way he seemed singularly out of harmony with his environment.

In size a child fit for the infant class, the precocious atom of humanity was in reality a young man quick of thought, intelligent far beyond his years and in deportment a gentleman of culture. At the age of 12 he graduated from the public schools with the high ... per cent ... in the Rhode Island schools and was taken to France by his parents. There he was placed under the tutelage of the best French, German and Italian masters and soon acquired a knowledge of those languages that astonished. At 15 he was fluent in four tongues.

His elocution brought about his professional debut, which occurred in the opera house at Providence, R. I. Subsequently he entered vaudeville with Al Lamar, who is still his partner. Then came "Buster Brown," which he played for more than 1,200 performances. Then wishing to return to vaudeville Mr. Lamar wrote "Aunt ...'s Visit" for him.

The young man is a thirty third degree Mason, a Scottish Rite Knight and a Mystic Shriner, being the youngest member of these organizations and the smallest in the world. He is an engaging conversationalist and is fond of children.

WESTWARD HO!

BY CHARLES KINGSLEY

COPYRIGHT, 1907, BY IRVING KING. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

IN ALL the steeples of Bideford in Devon the joy bells were ringing. The streets were filled with people in all holiday attire and the houses hung with garlands. This stout blond giant, Amyas Leigh of Burrough, and four other sturdy men of Devon had just returned from their voyage with Drake, the first English sailors who ever broke into the South Sea and sailed around the world. It was five years since Amyas had kissed his mother goodby and sailed away with Frank Drake. He went away a willowy lad and came back a full grown man with a beard and an air of command and a love of adventure strong in his heart, ... of those sea dogs of Devon who at that time were singeing the beard of the King of Spain and finding new worlds for the Virgin Queen beyond the [illegible] seas.

All the gentry of North Devon had gathered to welcome Amyas home. Standing beside his gray haired widowed mother was his elder brother, Frank, fresh from court with court manners and court dress, which were the envy of the provincial gallants. Frank was tall like his brother, but not sturdy like him. His form was lithe and graceful and his face like those which Raphael used to paint, but the ... spot on either white cheek showed too plainly the presence of a disease which already had begun to sap his vitality.

Among those who pressed forward to take Amyas by the hand was his cousin Eustace, ... son of Mr. Leigh of Chapel. Eustace was a man from whom his bluff and sturdy cousin shrank instinctively. His father had remained a Catholic upon the accession of Elizabeth, and it was whispered that Eustace had ... now ... a member of the Society of Jesuits—crimes in those days in England which were likely to bring a man ... to the block or his body to the stake. However, though Elizabeth occasionally burned Catholics to discipline them—as her sister Mary had burned Protestants for conscience's sake—and their father Henry had burned Catholics and Protestants alike ... for his own sake—quiet old gentlemen like Mr. Leigh of Chapel, who paid their tithes to the established church regularly and kept their religious opinions to themselves, were occasionally allowed to live unmolested in remote parts of England under the protection of powerful relatives.

In this day of his triumphant homecoming Amyas was generous, and greeted even his Popish cousin cordially, but he looked for one face only, and looked in vain, though to see it would have been gladder than to see any other unless it were the dear face of his mother: Rose Salterne, daughter of the rich mayor of Bideford—the Rose of Torridge, she was called after the river which ran through the town—was not visible at the rejoicings.

In fact her father had packed her off to some poor relatives in the neighborhood, for her beauty had turned the heads of all the well-born gallants in North Devon as well as the heads of all the prentice boys in Bideford, and, as he ... frankly told Mrs. Leigh of Burrough, he was too proud, plain burgher though he was, to have his daughter marry into a family where she could not be received as an equal. In the reign of Queen Bess a burgher, however wealthy, was a burgher still, and a gentleman was a gentleman even though he had no second coat to his back.

Rose Salterne was a thorough specimen of a West coast maiden, full of passionate and impulsive affection and a wild dreamy imagination. Left early without a mother's care, her father had petted her and spoiled her until she took attention as her natural due, and if people praised her wondrous beauty—why ... did not her looking glass tell her that their admiration was justly bestowed?

Years ago as a schoolboy Amyas had loved her, a little girl, and now he returned home after his wanderings to be told that she had grown into a dazzling young woman of 18. He would soon see her again, he thought, and indeed he was right, for Rose's banishment was not for long.

But Amyas soon saw that Frank, too, loved the Rose of Torridge, and he resolved to think no more of her—that is to think of her as little as he could help—and he could even pray for the success of the suit of his brother, whom he loved unselfishly.

Amyas had not long settled down to the quiet life of Burrough when all North Devon was aroused by the news that a force of Spaniards had landed on the coast of Ireland and taken the fort at Smerwick, and with the hastily collected parts of the other youth of the region he prepared an expedition to fight the invaders. Eustace Leigh also departed, but not to fight his country's battles. He stole away a fugitive, having been discovered in treasonable correspondence with the enemy.

Poor Frank did not dare to go to Ireland without the permission of the Virgin Queen, who kept a tight rein upon her courtiers, but if he could not go to make war abroad he ... that before the expedition sailed he would make peace at home.

The well born young men of North Devon were scarcely on speaking terms with each other all on account of Rose Salterne. Not that Rose had given any one of them cause to hope, but then neither had she given any one of them cause to despair. The air was full of rumors of duels over the mayor's daughter, and Frank saw that if this state of things continued there would be bloodshed, for one beautiful woman can bring many brave men to grief.

So Frank persuaded all the gallants who aspired to the love of Rose to come to a dinner with him at the Ship Tavern, and there, when the wine had begun to work and the guests were in a receptive mood, he proposed the health of the Rose of Torridge and made a speech to them. He declared how ill it was that men of Devon who stood shoulder to shoulder throughout the world should be at swords drawn with each other in their native land. He set before them that no one could claim any better right to her than another, and proposed that they should follow the example of the knights of old, in binding themselves together in fellowship with one object of adoration and part in search of adventures, to return after three years had passed and let Rose choose which was the most worthy of her love.

Frank's words moved his hearers to enthusiasm, and all the young men leaped up and swore friendship to each other and fidelity ... on the hilt of Frank's sword.

Thus was found[ed] the Brotherhood of the Rose, which was ... the fair of the Mayor's daughter ... to the verge of the Seven Seas.

The heart of Amyas ... that this ... was Frank's ... and perhaps he might after all carry off the prize that all men coveted. He sailed with his expedition and took a hand ... siege to the fort ... until ... that the Spaniards ... forced to surrender.

The common soldiers were all put to the sword as a warning to other Spaniards, and the officers held for ransom. To many ... a surrendered garrison was thought rather a work of pity in those days, both by Spaniards and Englishmen. When the Spanish officers were distributed among their captors, Amyas claimed as his share Don Guzman de Soto, grandson of that famous cavalier who was with Pizarro in Peru, and who afterward found his grave in the waters of the Mississippi.

Don Guzman was all that a hidalgo of such ancestry should be—courtly, brave and generous. Once during the siege, when a cannon ball had carried away the staff from which floated the proud flag of Castile, Don Guzman leaped upon the parapet amid a storm of shot and shell, ... in his armor, held the banner aloft until another staff could be procured.

At the close of the campaign Amyas sent his captive on parole to Bideford, where Sir Richard Grenville, his father's old friend, agreed to keep him as a guest until his ransom should arrive.

This was the same Sir Richard who later was to fight his immortal fight of "the one and the fifty three" when his little Revenge fell in with a Spanish armada off the Azores.

Don Guzman and he got on well together as two brave gentlemen will in spite of all differences in religion and nationality.

As for Amyas, he soon was up and away again. He sailed with that disastrous expedition of Sir Humphrey Gilbert which sought to colonize Newfoundland. It was "Westward-ho" in the reign of Elizabeth, and from Labrador to the Brazils the gentlemen adventurers of England were seeking their fortunes in plundered Spanish fleets and cities or in newly founded colonies.

The family of Don Guzman was poor, Spain a long way from England in those days, and so nearly two years had passed since the don came to Bideford, and nearly three since the founding of the Brotherhood of the Rose, when the looked-for ransom arrived at last. With the ransom came an order of the Spanish king appointing De Soto governor of the Caracas, as Venezuela was then called, and so he departed. But all that night Rose Salterne lay moaning upon her bed, calling out for him to come back to her.

Perhaps he heard! At any rate, a few days after the Don's departure Rose was missing. They traced her to the hut of Lucy Passmore, an old woman who lived by the waterside and was reputed a witch. But the hut was empty. Lucy also had flown. There were rumors later of a tall Spanish-looking man accompanied by two women, one young and one old, having passed over to the Isle of Lundy in a fishing boat, and then all trace of the fugitives was lost.

Will Cary, one of the Knights of the Rose, who had returned from the Irish wars, raged like a lion. All Bideford mourned for its lost beauty, and old Mayor Salterne sat among his piled up bags ... broken hearted, but waiting patiently for something—he would not say what.

Such was the condition of affairs when Amyas ... at Plymouth empty handed, ragged and ... worn—one of the few survivors of the disasters that had overwhelmed the expedition of Sir Humphrey Gilbert.

Mrs. Hawkins, wife of Sir John Hawkins, the famous old freebooter who originated the African slave trade, received Amyas and supplied his wants.

"And—by the way, Captain Leigh," said the lady, "I have sad news for you from your own town." And she told him of the elopement of Rose Salterne. Amyas dropped back into his chair as if he had been shot, but he recovered himself before kind Mrs. Hawkins could rush to the cupboard for cordials.

"You'll forgive me, madam," said he. "I am weak from the sea, and your good ale has dizzied me a bit, I think."

"Try a little aqua vitae," urged the hospitable lady. "My Captain John has it right good, and is a bit too fond of it too, poor dear soul."

After a night of sleepless tossing Amyas started for Bideford, swearing to himself: "The man that did that deed I will pursue around the world and take vengeance on him."

As Amyas and his few followers were making their way from Plymouth to Bideford they were set upon by a gang of ... outlaws who sheltered in the hills near Brent. But the men of the sea laid round them lustily, and the wild men were driven off, leaving their leader mortally wounded on the field.

As he lay dying he called for a priest, and to the surprise of all a priest appeared—a Jesuit who had been concealed near by, a man come to do missionary work among the strange wild people ... whom ... missionaries ... There was only one fight of any gravity. Some Spaniards who ... cabin and opened fire. The English ... charged them and Amyas engaged the commander in sword play. Just as the Spaniard was making a lunge at ... which would have done for him a bright blade flashed over his shoulder. The Spanish commander fell, and Ayacanora, with hair streaming over her shoulders and her raised knife dripping blood, stood defiant and savage, threatening all who should come near her Englishman.

By daybreak they had the ship under way, bounding to the eastward. The signs of the conflict had been cleared away and Amyas invited his prisoners to breakfast with him. Among the captives was the Bishop of Cartagena, returning home in search of a more peaceful see where Englishmen should not trouble, for the year before Drake had ravaged all the Spanish Main, taken Cartagena and held it to ransom. As Amyas and Cary were bandying stately compliments with their Spanish prisoners in came Salvation Yeo, reporting that a woman prisoner had been discovered on board in chains. He led her in before them all, a withered old woman, bent and scarred with the rack and the lash, and half demented. It was poor Lucy Passmore, who had gone away with Rose when she eloped with Don Guzman. And such a tale as Lucy poured forth!

Rose had been happy with her husband until, urged thereto by charges made by Eustace Leigh, the inquisition had taken her from Don Guzman and Charles Kingsley's "Westward Ho" is a novel dealing with the stirring times of Queen Elizabeth, when England and Spain were fighting to the death for the mastery of the seas.

This ... the most read of all Kingsley's work and gives an admirable picture of the ... and times of the ... which laid the foundation of Freedom's ... empire in the days of Elizabeth. The Spanish were ... the New World and the English were robbing ... thought ... the devil and enemies of God. The bitter hatred ... the ... of the ... with the spirit of the men of ... and the gusto with which the reverend author ... his ... it appears that he himself ... a large share of the prejudice of ... Perhaps it is just this innate belief that there are no really noble men but English men and ... religion but that of the Church of England which enabled the author to enter so thoroughly into the spirit of the times of which he wrote and breathe such ... into the characters which move across the stage in "Westward Ho."

"Has she found ... ?" retorted Amyas. "That is just what I propose to find out for myself."

When Amyas reached Bideford it proved that his arrival was what the father of Rose had been waiting for, and he offered gold for the fitting out of an expedition that should go and rescue his daughter. But Frank and Will Cary also claimed a right to contribute, and the three sailed away with Amyas Westward ho as soon as the fitting out of the ship was completed. Impression he had made upon that wild spirit she did not try to ... one ... though the Englishman had repelled her advances he took leave of her with some sorrow.

Among the Bideford men whom Amyas took with him was Salvation Yeo, a fanatical Anabaptist, who had been one of the band of unfortunate John Oxenham. When that doughty leader, after much pillaging, met his death by lingering too long in the neighborhood of Panama with the young wife of an aged Spanish official, Salvation Yeo had been captured and sent to the galleys of Cartagena, escaping after much suffering to return to his own land.

Now in those wilds John Oxenham had left a little daughter, the child of sin, but very dear to Yeo, who had tended her ... through the wilderness. He still called her his little maid, and believed that one day he should find her again. So he begged to be allowed to go with Amyas, for in the land to which they were bound he believed he would come across his Little Maid, and he was sure he could kill many Spaniards.

It was a fair tropic afternoon when Amyas's ship, the Rose, sailed in front of the port of La Guayra and saw lying within the protection of the forts an a man wearing a cloak drawn over the lower part of his face came around the corner of the house.

The two were the Rose of Torridge and Eustace Leigh.

They were talking earnestly.

"What do you mean by praising my husband thus to me?" broke out Rose. "Do you not think I know his virtues better than you?"

"Husband!" whispered Frank to Amyas. "Thank God for that."

"My love for him and his trust in me you can never destroy," continued Rose, and then she rained a torrent of reproach on Eustace, calling him serpent and tempter, and concluding: "I, Donna Rosa de Soto, bid you leave this place forever."

Eustace whispered something in her ear. Her answer was a shriek. Quick of wit and speaking truer than he knew, Eustace shouted: "Help, slave! Your mistress is being carried off by bandits."

At once a great tumult arose and bands of armed slaves came sweeping down between Rose and the Englishmen. The alarm spread to the town and it was a hard fight all the way back to the boat.

Amyas hit by a large stone lost his senses. When he came to himself he was in the boat ... his men had dragged him ... the ship. But Frank was gone—captured by the Spanish—and some were killed.

The discovery that Rose had not been deceived by Don Guzman, but was his lawful and trusted wife, put a new complexion on affairs, but hatred for the Spaniard was stronger than ever in the heart of Amyas, and stronger the desire to have the man's life.

And, oh, his grief for Frank! What answer should he give his mother when he returned home again?

had impressed as their guide and interpreter. But no sight of golden domes greeted their eager eyes ... forest and the mountains, and here and there a few savages who fled at their approach.

At last they came to a place where a tribe of Indians lived in a state of semi-civilization, governed by a wonderful maiden whom they called the Child of the Sun. They had found her wandering in the forest toward the Peruvian frontier and believed her to be one of the lost children of the Incas—that Inca who should one day come again to avenge his death and his race and drive the Spaniard into the sea.

When this maiden came forth from her hut to tell the strangers that they were welcome to stay in her territory the Englishmen were astonished at her appearance. Surpassingly beautiful in a wild savage way in face and form, Ayacanora, as her people called her, had the features of a European, and though her skin was browned by the tropic suns it was easy to see that its natural complexion was not that of the Indian.

Heavy bands of gold were around her arms and her neck was encircled by a golden collar. Her air was one of command and her slightest wish seemed to be law to the tribe.

The adventurers had been eighty when they left their ship. They were only forty now, and was worn and weary. So in this earthly paradise they rested awhile from their toils. Some of the men were for staying there forever, and even the mind of Amyas was crossed by such a thought. But at last, shaking off this new temptation, he roused his men and continued the toilsome march.

There was no thought of finding El Dorado now, only to build boats, float down ... of the streams, and, captur-brought both her and Lucy to trial on the charges of heresy and witchcraft. The Inquisition had pronounced them guilty and handed them over to the secular arm with a charge that there be no shedding of blood.

"But oh!" said Lucy. "They took the poor child out into the market place and burned her, and Master Frank, too."

"Frank!" exclaimed Amyas.

"Yes, yes," continued Lucy, "he was captured alive the night the boat came to La Guayra, and him they burned along with Miss Rose, the two holding each other's hands to the last."

Lucy had saved her own life by a timely conversion, but had been continued prisoner and was being taken to Spain for ... Don Guzman ... had resigned his government ... and ... to ... the Holy Office of the king.

Eustace ... with remorse had fled ... whether he had been killed by Indians or was expiating his ... little was ... known ... never saw him again.

"That man was there at the burning," suddenly cried Lucy, pointing to the Bishop, "and that one," indicating ... who attended him.

A look ... had gathered on the face of Amyas as Lucy Passmore told her tale.

"Is this so?" said he ... to the Bishop.

"I was compelled to be present—unwillingly to be present. The secular arm, I cannot interfere with that any more than I can with the Holy Office. I do not belong to either—as these gentlemen ..."

But in vain unspoken were the feeble excuses of the Bishop. In the mighty whirlwind of grief and rage which swept over Amyas, calling his men, he took the prelate and the ... out on deck and ... them with short ... long ... the yard arm. Then he went back to breakfast.

A cabin was assigned to poor Lucy, ... clothing found for her among the rich cargo of the captured ship, and Ayacanora assigned to wait upon her. In a week or so the aged woman ...

Then happened a strange thing.

> A handy hands ... O
> Wi... ale and brandy O
> With a rumbelow and a Westward ho,
> And heave my mariners all O

To the surprise of every one Ayacanora, who was on deck, caught up the burden of the song and sang it over again with all the peculiar intonation given it by Yeo.

For the moment Yeo stood as one dazed. Then he fell at the girl's feet, crying out: "At last, at last. My little maid, my little maid." It was ... his little maid that sang ... of Panama.

Gradually, piece by piece, the past came back to Ayacanora sufficient to ... no doubt that she was the child of John Oxenham so long sought for by Salvation Yeo.

And now again the bells of Bideford were ringing, bonfires blazing and the people rejoicing, not this time on account of the return of Amyas Leigh, though indeed, his ship was nearing the shore, but because Queen ... had just cut off the head of Mary Queen of Scots and it was patriotic and pious to make merry therefor. To such an England and his waiting mother Amyas came home with enough of captured Spanish treasure to make him, if and all who had sailed with him and survived rich for life.

With saintly resignation Mrs. Leigh bore the news of Frank's death. Old Mayor Salterne, when told the story of his daughter's end, shut himself up in the little room from which she had flown and was found dead there.

Ayacanora, under the care of Mrs. Leigh, became a civilized English girl, and though Amyas still held aloof from her she attended him with the devotion of a faithful hound.

Now came the year of the Spanish Armada and the fight which took place when that great fleet met the English in the Channel. Amyas won his spurs and was dubbed knight on his own deck.

In the midst of the fight he saw a great tall ship of Spain and standing high on the poop Don Guzman de Soto. Amyas attacked with fury. The two men gazed at each other and hurled defiance at each other's throats, but Amyas could not capture the great ship of the enemy, and when that day's fighting was over the fleets were separated. But when the flight of the Invincible Armada around the north end of the British Isles began Amyas singled out the ... of Don Guzman and stuck to her through storm and tempest pursuing ... until separated ... her ... came plunging through a fury ... down St. George's channel into the seas which wash the Devon coast.

A tremendous thunder storm was raging and by ... of the flash of lightning the men on Amyas's ship saw the Spanish vessel ahead of them go crashing on the rocks of Lundy, ... in a whirl ... Amyas ... his own ship ... had just ... when a great crash ... blinding flash of lightning ... When ... picked up Amyas ... and at his ... Salvation Yeo dead.

The ship put into Lundy and as soon as Amyas was sufficiently recovered he bade them take him to ... looking ... where Don Guzman's ship went down and ...

When ... to ... he said ... Don Guzman ... valiant ... of Spain ... and his officers ... the ... Don Guzman ... his ... my ... Don ...

The ... parted ... Amyas ... We have had a ... to ... once more. My wife and your brother have forgiven ... so your honor takes ...

And Amyas ... answered: "We are friends, Don Guzman. ... has judged our quarrel."

He took Amyas by the hand and ... blind man ... walk.

They carried him ... to Burrough ... and Ayacanora ... alone ... Mrs. Leigh ... room ... saw the girl sobbing on his heart. The stricken man had at last returned the long love and devotion of the daughter of John Oxenham.

And so he who had been a savage queen became Lady Leigh of Burrough, and her songs often carried the fancy of the blind knight in the wake of those heroes who, from time to time, sail out to colonize another and vaster England to the ... Westward ho!

"The men on Amyas's ship saw the Spanish vessel ahead of them go crashing on the rocks of Lundy"

Among Men who Work with Hand or Brain

Boss Was Watching Ellet; Advises Him to Get Married.

By C. E. Severn.

T[illegible] company was [illegible] with [illegible]. The news had leaked out that the [illegible] Pangle, the highest salaried man in the office, who for ten days had been absent from the office ostensibly because he was sick, in reality had decamped with some of the corporation's money. Further, it was said that a detective agency had kept the other men in the office under surveillance for a week, and that the operatives had reported concerning the personal habits and expenditures of the remaining nine clerks comprising the office force. It was known that the old man had been proud of his office corps; he treated the men well, and in return they seemed loyal to the corporate interests as typified by the old man.

The old man was old in years and he retained a few of the antiquated business ideas of a former day, seemingly with no detriment to the welfare of the firm. The office men felt uncomfortable, perhaps not a single one of them was entirely at ease at the thought that detectives had dogged his steps and had pried into his outside life. Before quitting time the old man went into the office and the nine men there, while apparently busy at their tasks, realized that the psychological moment had come.

Old Man Makes a Speech.

With a cough for attention the old man said: "You may not know that Mr. Pangle has embezzled from the company and is now a criminal—a fugitive from justice whom we are trying to arrest. A natural tendency to be a good fellow and an association with a horsy crowd account for his downfall. When we learned of Pangle's defalcation I took the advice of the other directors to have you all bonded. The Pangle matter made me curious to know how you men spent your time outside of business hours, and from a reputable detective agency I have had reports covering the last week. The information that I received is not unsatisfactory and it is held confidential, of course. That is all"—but the boss walked over to Ellet's desk and spoke to him, whereupon he followed the old man to the private office. The other men plainly were aware that there was to be a sequence so far as Ellet was concerned.

The other clerks would have almost sworn that Ellet was straight, even though they knew that he was mysterious in his habits, he was liberal with his money without being a spender, a fact that condoned in the estimation of the other clerks Ellet's aggressive enterprise in cultivating side lines of profit.

Keeping Tab on Ellet's Movements.

Ellet was pale by the time he was facing the boss in the little office and he gave a rapt attention to the words of the old man, who said: "Ellet, you have been a capable worker and I have no criticism to offer on that score, but I want some light on certain statements that were in the report concerning you that I received from the detective." The old man spread a sheet of paper before Ellet, who began to read a brief [illegible] account of his doings during his off hours for a week past.

"Tuesday night," said the boss, "you see that you lost $3 playing pool with a friend. You then went to a burlesque show with him and afterwards to a chop suey place. You spent over $5 that evening. On Thursday night you were in a cigar store, took two chances on a raffle, and bought cigars for the clerks there. Friday night you took two young women to the theater and enjoyed a supper with them afterwards—certainly an expensive evening. Saturday night according to the report you wandered aimlessly, visited several 5 cent theaters, and stood on a street corner for awhile, evidently waiting for some one who did not appear. Finally you took a car for your home much farther out on the west side. Ellet, you know your salary here is $90 a month," and the old man paused.

Where the Money Came From.

At first Ellet's voice trembled a bit, but he soon steadied it. "Mr. Ban[illegible], the detective's report is fair and truthful. However, last month I made $130. My salary here was $90. I took two of the boys in the office to an oculist friend of mine who fitted them with glasses; you know the electric light is hard on the eyes. Altogether I have sent five of the boys to him and several weeks ago he sent me $5 for my courtesy, as he put it."

"It pays to be polite," said the old man evenly.

"Two months ago," pursued Ellet, "I staked Ferdinand with $60 and became a silent partner in his lunch room down the street. Last week I received $15 as my share of the first profits. I sold the foreign stamps that I removed from the firm's correspondence to a stamp dealer for $8; there are a good many high denomination stamps on the small machinery parts sent to us by customers in different parts of the world, particularly South Africa, and the stamps are in demand by collectors."

The boss allowed no reinstatement to interrupt [illegible] who continued: "I sent a [illegible] sketch touching upon [illegible] logical phase to the Tide and Tide magazine. It was accepted and here you see," said Ellet, producing [illegible] magazine [illegible] in payment. Last Saturday night I was into an unusual neighborhood with the idea of studying the people and obtaining material for another sketch."

"So," said the old man dryly.

Every Man Should Marry.

"One of the young women in whose company I was Friday night," said Ellet, "is a dear. I mean she is a close friend, that is, I hope [illegible]," stammered Ellet, and was at a loss for words. Then the old man spoke.

"The other petty infractions which [illegible] approving of them, I think I understand. It seems to me that it is to your interest to [illegible] whole thought on your duties in the office. You should concentrate all your faculties and energy on your work for us. We want the whole mind and effort. I have been thinking of giving you Pangle's place, but you now have no interests unconnected with those of the firm and dismiss your side lines. I would prefer a married man for the position, which pays $1,800 a year. You know, I believe marriage for a man."

[illegible] the old [illegible] a few of these sentiments the old man [illegible] had married. "I [illegible] said eagerly, "I am not married but I am engaged to be [illegible] tomorrow morning, is that all right?"

"Well," said the boss.

"I shall be waiting for you when you get here in the morning," returned Ellet.

"How about the sociology and the unusual neighborhoods?"

"Oh, I think that I shall concentrate all my general interest in the human family on my [illegible]—and a cozy flat," said Ellet confidently.

Why Retail Merchants Fail; Wholesalers' Point of View.

By George Brett.

CRITICISM is valuable from the outsider because it is well known that the outsider sees most of the game. Much criticism is captious, trivial and worthless, but such cannot be said of the utterances of the large wholesalers. These firms are interested in the welfare of the small retailer; they want to help him if he be honest; they do help him. Again and again when a worthy storekeeper in a small town is straining his credit more often than not he gets the benefit of the doubt as to whether it is advisable to give him more time or let him have another bill of goods on thirty or sixty days without his having paid [illegible] his one.

But note the [illegible] is far [illegible] the wholesalers will [illegible] thousands of dollars in a few months [illegible] of them. [illegible] of the large wholesalers [illegible] the writer [illegible] why retailers fail. The [illegible] follows:

Why Retail Stores Fail.

Insufficient knowledge of the real value of merchandise.

Poor advertising.

Inattention [illegible].

Failure to [illegible] a fixed percentage [illegible] the cost [illegible] as freight, drayage, rent, salaries, [illegible] expenses, etc.

To the reasons mentioned above must be added the failure [illegible] to turn over the stock quickly.

[illegible] admitted that modern conditions demand a quick turnover [illegible]. One sales manager stated his views as follows:

"It stands to common sense that if a woman goes into a [illegible] store and sees some goods which have just arrived, fresh, fashionable and tempting, she will be able to resist buying [illegible] necessary [illegible] to make [illegible]. It pays a storekeeper to buy [illegible] goods in small quantities [illegible] better.

New Goods Tempt Customers.

The clerks get tired of looking at shop worn goods which have been [illegible] [illegible] feeling of the [illegible] weeks [illegible] goods [illegible] [illegible] large profits [illegible] at [illegible]. Of course [illegible] of goods [illegible] profit [illegible] to do so.

The small retailer [illegible] taken [illegible] sales [illegible] the [illegible] of the people with goods of [illegible]. When goods get a little shopworn [illegible] there is nothing better than [illegible] knife [illegible] a [illegible] will [illegible] the [illegible] the store. People [illegible] big [illegible] are reasons for making bargain prices, not fictitious true prices, but honest logical reasons.

Fixing the Margin of Profit.

Wholesalers aim [illegible] of small storekeepers [illegible] merchandise [illegible] of [illegible] the fixing of prices at [illegible] and [illegible] margin of profit [illegible] the merchant.

The [illegible] manager [illegible] stated that forty [illegible] to figure in the selling price of an article a percentage which will cover [illegible] the goods still becomes [illegible] shopworn.

The advertising of most retailers is [illegible] [illegible] 100 per cent better [illegible] was a few years ago. The [illegible] the country advertiser is that [illegible] apt to be unsystematic.

One of the best known wholesale [illegible] firms in the country who maintain [illegible] advertising [illegible] expressed [illegible] views as follows:

Advertising Must Be Systematic.

"From the standpoint of publicity [illegible] reason why so many retail clothiers do not do more business is because they have no prearranged plans for putting out their advertising. It is too often a hand to mouth game.

"It stands to common sense that if a retailer outlines a campaign his efforts will be much more likely to bear fruit because they have been matured by careful study and close thought as to the best course of action. It is foolish to rush into print on a decision based on the impulse of the moment.

"When business is good [illegible] reason a great many retailers figure they [illegible] noticed [illegible] verse. When trade is dull they say [illegible] body will buy anyway, so what is the use of advertising? A great many of them [illegible] one or two big flaring announcements during the season and then forget all about publicity.

"Want of steady, judicious advertising often [illegible] retailers to [illegible] large stock of goods on hand [illegible]. Frequently the man [illegible] large [illegible] the [illegible] season [illegible].

"From [illegible] to [illegible] per cent [illegible] age of money expended by [illegible] stores for publicity [illegible] to 3 per cent [illegible] its."

Methods of State Street Store.

The [illegible] of science and system [illegible] with the [illegible] of a large [illegible] following statement made by the head of their advertising department:

"We [illegible] advertising [illegible] Every [illegible] desk [illegible] sales of each department for [illegible] preceding day [illegible] and dates [illegible] what [illegible] of [illegible] gives the sales for three years back [illegible] corresponding days for the same month.

"I know exactly what amount [illegible] it costs to sell certain lines. A man [illegible] figure [illegible] space it costs to advertise distinctly. [illegible] And when goods are creating more than a certain percentage [illegible] something wrong. We [illegible] than [illegible] per cent [illegible] salable goods through [illegible].

"[illegible] goods have been [illegible] salaries [illegible] dead [illegible] the stocks of different goods on hand, whether or not they are getting out of date [illegible] [illegible] all this [illegible] that I may know [illegible] getting sold."

Ad Is Motive Power of Business.

"I [illegible] believe [illegible] advertising [illegible] as a kind of motive power essential [illegible] machinery of business [illegible] [illegible] in a systematic way. He [illegible] expect it [illegible] audit [illegible] [illegible] wholesale [illegible] does not know how to [illegible].

"[illegible] was [illegible] a man [illegible] experience [illegible] people [illegible] his firm [illegible] most part [illegible] The item [illegible].

"[illegible] years [illegible] often [illegible] frequently [illegible] [illegible] practical [illegible]."

Lack Skill in Buying.

"[illegible] I have wondered [illegible] buying. In [illegible] experience I have noticed the [illegible] retailer [illegible] fall [illegible] lack of skill in buying [illegible] [illegible] other [illegible].

"Generally the small [illegible] overstocks himself [illegible] frequently [illegible] prices for [illegible] lack of [illegible] the part of the [illegible] own [illegible] the straight [illegible] [illegible] must [illegible] able to say [illegible] more [illegible].

"When the retailer engages in [illegible] the salesman he wants to have all [illegible] The retailer should remember that [illegible] correspond with those of the salesman [illegible] [illegible] placing an order without due consideration as to how long it will take him to dispose of the goods [illegible] worth [illegible] money and what profit he will get out of the transaction."

Grocers Buy Larger Bills.

In the grocery line especially I have known [illegible] fact that many failures in the [illegible] retail [illegible] goods [illegible] too high at a low figure [illegible] these goods realized next to nothing.

"The retailer [illegible] the mail order man by stealing his [illegible] readers [illegible] advertising [illegible] ever if [illegible] little to boost the use of good advertising brains. There is one vital truth the storekeeper always should remember: a store is made attractive to the [illegible] by [illegible] bargains to be found in it. Especially [illegible] feminine [illegible] [illegible] make a [illegible] selling he sells [illegible] occasionally [illegible] the price [illegible] pays for [illegible] new trade and making firm friends.

"The following [illegible] emphasis: You can [illegible] sell goods [illegible] get people into your store. How is the retailer going to get a crowd into his store unless he makes offers which will be interesting?"

Does Boss Have Favorites? Why Not Be One of Them?

By Joseph Cox.

ASK the man who has remained in [illegible] several years in a mediocre position why he never has advanced to a more lucrative place and he in all probability will tell you it is due to unjust discrimination by the boss. He will point to some one who has succeeded and say that in all fairness the place this man is occupying should be his, but that this man had a pull and that he has found that when an opportunity for promotion was open the boss always had some favorite or hanger-on to fill the place. Perhaps this is true, but why was he not the favorite of the boss on some occasion if he has the requisite ability to fill a better place? This question usually brings him to the point and he will state to you that he never has nor never shall [illegible] toady to any man to gain a good word, and that if the boss cannot promote him on his ability alone he never shall get after him with blandishments. The trouble with him is one that affects a great many employés. He has mistaken good breeding for sycophancy. He thinks that the worker who shows a respectful attitude toward the boss is bidding for his favor when he is but simply exercising the rules of good manners.

Useless to Stand on Dignity.

The habit of getting on one's dignity with the boss just because he is the boss is one that [illegible] commonly met with among working people and certainly does them more harm than good. We have seen capable men occupying [illegible] positions because they made no attempt to treat the boss as a gentleman. They seemed to think that it showed bravery on their part to manifest a little hostility toward him on every possible occasion. In fact, we have often heard the remark, "I am not afraid of him. If he is the boss, I don't [illegible]." It was a case of fight with the employer instead of keeping on good terms with him and treating him as one gentleman should treat another. It hardly is necessary to add that such a manner does not raise the possessor in the estimation of the boss.

But this attitude of hostility is no worse in its effect than is that of a stubborn disposition. Some employés cannot take orders from the boss without feeling that he is questioning their ability, and they straightway proceed to show by their actions [illegible] regard his instructions as an affront. They will go so far as to compel him to go over in detail what he has told them to do, pretending that they do not understand how his ideas can be applied to the job in question. A worker of this class never will add a single stroke to a job of his own accord while the stubborn spell is upon him, although he may see where the boss has overlooked some essential point.

Sulk Like Spoiled Children.

We have met with many persons [illegible] in our associations with working people, and have seen them sulk like spoiled children for days simply because the boss did not take time to ask their opinion before giving instructions as to how the work should be done. If when a thing of this kind occurs the employé would go to the boss and ask that he listen to his plan for doing this particular piece of work, there is not one boss in a dozen who would not listen and who would not adopt all of his ideas that were practical. This certainly would be more creditable to the employé than to show his ill breeding by pouting.

There is yet another class of workers who are in the habit of doing themselves considerable injury by not controlling their tempers. They are agreeable so long as things go smoothly, but the moment something happens to make them mad they go to and say things that are harmful to their welfare. They may repent as soon as the spell leaves them, but that will not remove the effect that has been produced. It is not unusual sight to see a man who is the victim of an uncontrolled temper go [illegible] over some trivial affair and quit his place. His family may be depending on his wages for the daily bread, but he does not think of that. He likely does not know where he can secure another place, but that is not considered either. He is mad and being at the mercy of a habit he has not attempted to control, he can do nothing for the time being but obey its dictates, deferring thinking until reason again can ascend her throne. A worker of this [illegible] gets a reputation as being one hard to get on with, and employers are slow to place him in a position where his leaving would be of any consequence.

Agreeable Man Gets Promotion.

It hardly can be expected of a boss that he [illegible] feel kindly disposed toward an employé who manifests any of the above mentioned traits of character as he will toward one who always keeps his best qualities in front. We cannot justly condemn him if when he has a good position open he gives preference to that employé who always has put forth his best efforts in the interest of his employer and done willingly whatever he was asked to do.

A cheerful, kindly disposition is an asset which is sure to be of great value at some time.

Everybody Talks Business; Few Understand Its Meaning.

By a Business Man.

EVERYWHERE in these material [illegible] times we hear the young, the middle aged, the old, the lame, the halt, and even the blind talking about that one standard topic—Business.

How to start in business, how to conduct business, what business to enter, how to make a success of business—all of it is an unfailing topic of interest. Why? I know of no other answer than that it is because so many people know so little about it. People like to hear about things of which they know nothing almost as well as they love to talk about the things of which they know even less.

I am a junior partner in a most [illegible] line of business. There are only a few firms of [illegible] in the United States and our branch house in Austria is almost the only representative of the business on the continent of Europe. When we are in construction work we have no plant. Brain work to the max[illegible] [illegible] and operating forces and equipment at the minimum stand for us and for our competitors. A [illegible] contract is as likely to [illegible] miles as it is to come from our home city. All geography looks alike to us. A $1[illegible] contract is worth while. We eat [illegible] for $100,000 or over. [illegible] work time is a matter often of the greatest possible import to our [illegible] to complete a job in one month may mean $8,000. To complete it three or five days sooner may mean a bonus of $1,000 a day. To fail of the thirty days limit may [illegible] $1,000 a day.

Contracts Being Turned Away.

[illegible] our business is on a fixed [illegible] basis. We have been turning away contracts—putting them off—staving [illegible] time at which we can make the [illegible] competing [illegible] job [illegible] we can see our way to making. Our bank account [illegible] something to one of the [illegible] banks [illegible] Our credit is unquestioned [illegible]. Our working organization at its best. We are making money, and as time goes on we are going to make more and more money for the field in which we operate has not been opened at all. I [illegible] ten years will [illegible] promises to [illegible] for 10,000 years.

Making these statements broadly accurate and expecting them to be accepted as [illegible] lead [illegible] to a challenging statement [illegible] tremendous bearing upon this universal topic of business:

Business a Matter of Growth.

The point which I wish to emphasize is that any successful business of any magnitude is a thing of growth. It may be a business that is fifty years old or it may be a business of thirty days growth. But whatever ripening period necessary to its fruition as a business, it must have had an enormous man's faith [illegible] individual [illegible] sense and judgment and the further assurance [illegible] comes with experience gained [illegible] from day to day.

Ten years ago not a man in America would [illegible] the contracts which long ago became [illegible] the routine of business. And with the year when we have not from $500,000 to $2,000,000 bonded surety for the carrying out of our contracts is an exception. Men carrying out the detail work of our firm never sleep. Twenty-four hours a day for seven days in the week are covered in our pay rolls year after year. A careless gang of workmen might cost us $1,000,000 in a night. But on the other hand well organized gangs working to the best interests of the firm are making us $1,000 to $1,500 a day in bonuses. We have risks and we take them, but we have opportunity for money making.

Sending Money After More Money.

Considering my proposition of turning over the business as a gift to the ordinary man and finding him without the nerve to take it, I am considering human nature as I know it. The hardest proposition which one finds today is the search for the man who can be shown a safe business venture requiring money for its advancement when the first returns promised are longer away than a figurative tomorrow. Sending large sums of money out after more money is something which ordinary [illegible] does not enter into the ordinary business deal. In the greater ventures where this is necessary a corporation floats the venture through the sale of stocks. Thus in a possible failure the losses are distributed.

Today our concern is sending out small fortunes into the chance of business. Bonds in penalizing sums are required of us. More than this in the nature of our work we may execute a piece of work in such a manner as to leave us liable for damages to third parties. High salaries are the rule on our pay rolls. The closest study and the severest strain of concentration are expected of every man in official capacity. A superintendent never knows whether he may go to bed at night or whether getting to bed he may sleep until morning. As for heads of the house, telegrams at any hour of the night from any section of the country may send them for the next train in any direction pointed by the compass needle. One of the necessities of these heads of the concern is a packed valise filled with the necessities for a journey, one at the home and the other at the office.

Doing Things That Are Impossible.

Thus far, too, I have dealt only with those contracts that already have been taken by the company. Not all these contracts have come knocking at the office door. Times have been when the man or men most concerned in the work which we would undertake for them to their best interests have balked at the proposition.

"It can't be done" frequently has been the answer to the agent seeking the [illegible].

When it is considered that men making these dogmatic assertions in the negative are men of large affairs, the negation becomes serious above the ordinary [illegible]. Campaigning some times is necessary in a campaign of the kind runs into money rapidly. To give an agent $1,000 to $3,000 and send him out in search of patronage when it exacts a million dollar bond for the execution of the work—if he can get it—apparently in all suggests something of risk in itself. For sometimes he doesn't get it.

Thousands of wealthy men who have conducted loans and speculations for themselves half their lives are asking in terror to put half their wealth in a solid bank and in a place on the board of directors take risks of the banking business.

Can you find me a buyer for our business at 50 cents on the dollar?

Wholesale House Paid Graft; Printer's Buyer Got Money.

By Lester B. Colby.

THE [illegible] in the house is held by those who hold its trust [illegible] of the man for whose services adequate payment is made and who is supposed at every turn to be watchful of his employer's [illegible] is reaping [illegible] gains by receiving what he terms his legitimate commission the side.

A man versed in all the arts and requirements of printing bought out a house which had enjoyed a large business for years but which had realized small profits indeed.

From all outward appearances the business was a paying one. Auditors who examined the books spoke highly of its promised future. Yet there seemed to be a leak somewhere. The new proprietor by close comparison found that supplies in certain departments were costing far too much. He went to the seat of the matter and to his own satisfaction determined that the trusted buyer was receiving rebates from a firm selling thousands of dollars worth of supplies to the concern annually.

He immediately relieved the buyer of his job and put a man in his place in whom he had implicit confidence. The new man was instructed to ascertain the truth of the facts as speedily as possible.

An agent of the manufacturing firm shortly came around and the new buyer was given a proposition similar to the one the former man had been working under. He turned it offer down and acquainted his employer with the entire facts.

The employer then communicated with the house to the effect that he refused to deal with a firm exercising such methods. He told them frankly that he was paying the men who worked under him what was agreed between them as man and man as sufficient salaries for their services and as they could rebate the buyer he was plainly paying too much for what he was getting from them.

He closed with the statement that if there were any rebate it should go to the house and not personally to an employé of the house. But as he could not trust them to treat him with honesty after his experience he canceled all orders and absolutely would refrain from ever giving them another.

His word has [illegible] [illegible] kept. The wholesalers have lost thousands of dollars in trade, and [illegible] has set a precedent which if followed by other firms throughout the country will go far toward the stamping out of commercial graft so prevalent in all lines of trade at the present time.

How to Acquire a Vocabulary

By Robert Carlton Brown.

A MAN is judged as much by how he says a thing as by what he says. The proper use of the language will give [illegible] a certain distinction as well as a certain self-satisfaction. A man to be fully equipped must be able to express himself easily and accurately in both speaking and writing.

The habit of swearing has had something to do with lessening the majority of men's vocabularies. Did you ever notice that a great many men cannot tell a funny story without repeating certain oaths continually? These men use these oaths from habit formed by a lack of vocabulary, a lack of descriptive adjectives.

A vocabulary is a necessity and it is acquired easily. The first requisite step is to carry a vest pocket dictionary.

When you read a news item on the train and come upon an unfamiliar word take out your dictionary and look it up. It will surprise you how easily you will gather in expressive words in this manner.

When you look up the word check it off with your pencil; think of it a moment; fix it in your mind. The check mark is to show you that the word has been looked up, and if you look it up again the check will stand there accusingly and will prove a stimulus to the memory. You will be surprised at the number of checkmarks your little book will contain at the end of the month if you systematically look up each word that you do not know.

When you are at home reading do the same. When you hear a man use a new word look it up, and in a short time you seldom will have occasion to use your dictionary.

Whenever you write a letter practice on your new words. The only way to get a command of language is to practice; to use it, to make a sort of side line of it.

Night Trade Schools of the GREAT CITIES

TEACHING AMERICA'S FOREIGN POPULATION TO BECOME SELF SUPPORTING—THOUSANDS OF EAGER PUPILS THRONG THE FREE NIGHT SCHOOLS

Class in pattern making

Studying Electricity's Mysteries

ONE of the [illegible] signs of the times [illegible] found in the great [illegible] schools [illegible] during the [illegible] [illegible] ambitious youth climbing upward ever [illegible] do these belated student whose thirst for knowledge has never been quenched and is now kindled anew by the opportunity that has come their way.

Even the [illegible] comes [illegible] fifty. Almost every one of these elder [illegible] beginner [illegible] indeed become as a child. It entails [illegible] entire surrender of personal dignity [illegible] it is certain evidence of [illegible] sincerity. All their lives [illegible] have wanted to learn to read and write and has long [illegible] for the opportunity which has [illegible] [illegible] that [illegible] of manhood [illegible] to read and write should overcome the [illegible] that years have interposed.

[illegible] no entrance examination. There is [illegible] great liberty in the choice of subject. It is realized that every applicant for registration is in pursuit of knowledge for a definite purpose and every effort is made to help him to get what he wants in as short a time as possible. The compulsory education law provides for children under the age of fourteen but there is no limit in the other direction. Even a [illegible] the evening night schools contain great numbers of pupils who are [illegible] the [illegible] of the law [illegible] They are boys [illegible] forced to complete the [illegible] education during the day [illegible] They have not lost their desire to go on to further attainment and they feel that the night schools are [illegible] for something higher. Many [illegible] are of foreign birth coming to America when they were [illegible] their teens and thus having everything to learn. In fact the proportion of students of foreign birth in the evening schools is tremendous [illegible] The adult immigrant [illegible] in the free institutions an opportunity to gain an immediate knowledge of English. This is [illegible] the foreign new members [illegible] the custom for them to register for the night schools almost [illegible] they land on American shores.

[illegible] not attend the school unless they were permitted to bring their babies and small children [illegible]

[illegible] self made geniuses [illegible] of the [illegible] and great difficulties. No

Taking the free high school registration in the city of New York it appears that there were 3,070 non English speaking persons out of a total of 11,301. On account of this large enrollment the teaching of English has already become the most important feature of night school work. It has even been recommended to the board of education that a normal course for the training of teachers to teach English to foreigners be introduced into the evening high schools.

Of quite a different class intellectual [illegible] are the pupils of the evening high school. Most of them are younger than the pupils of the elementary schools and the struggle in which they are engaged is inspired by a loftier ambition. Perhaps it is not less pathetic than the other. In the night high school are the boys and girls who are toiling onward at the behest of some importunate ambition sometimes against forlorn odds. Some are fitting for college or the professional school. Others are satisfied with some special [illegible] that will advance them in their business careers. The arts also find their devotees—here those who labor all day at commercial pursuits often dis[illegible] tasteful and who are willing to work hard evening to gain the knowledge that alone will free them from their present uncongenial occupations. Most of the students at the high schools are those who have finished the grammar school but have had to go to work immediately afterward. In fact it is required of those who enter the night high school that they shall have completed the day grammar school course or be able to pass an equivalent examination.

But it must not be confined [illegible] the instruction given so freely in the night schools now maintained in all large American cities in purely academic. Manual training enters largely into the scheme of education. The opportunity is given to acquire that knowledge that will in time enable the pupil to better his condition. Many of the instructors in these night courses are men and women who are engaged at their several trades during the day time willing to impart their knowledge to classes of ambitious boys and girls during the evening.

These technical night schools are springing up everywhere and they are doing a great work. That their usefulness is recognized is apparent from the numbers who are seeking admission to them. These would be pupils [illegible] for the most part apprentices who have worked hard all day and who are now willing to continue at labor that is quite as exhausting. The young mechanic recognizes that he will make more rapid progress in his chosen [illegible] can obtain the instruction of these schools.

One of the most successful free night schools of this kind is in Brooklyn. It has an enrollment of [illegible] men and women and the waiting list is a long one. Each student must have had some previous knowledge of the course which he [illegible] and he is not permitted to undertake any other subject. The equipment of this model school is so perfect that students have every possible advantage for advanced work. Much money has been expended in fitting the machine and joinery shops [illegible] and the rooms devoted to cooking dressmaking and millinery are quite as well provided for. Although the students [illegible] the aim is to develop individual work and no one is either advanced or retarded by the work of his neighbor.

One of the classes that has always had a good attendance and has also demonstrated its usefulness is the one in which plumbing is taught. All of the pupils [illegible] apprentices and the instruction is of practical plumbing. In this class it is possible to accomplish as much [illegible] months as would ordinarily require [illegible] Everything pertaining to [illegible] is taught thoroughly—everything that [illegible] the [illegible] but the [illegible] is missing. [illegible]

One stop in this model trade school [illegible] stipulates that its students shall be apprentices. This is the class in which carpentry is taught. Some of the pupils [illegible] is a [illegible] carpenter [illegible] good one. They begin with the simplest forms of carpentry and as they progress they learn all the details of house building, window and [illegible] the panel work and all the other mysteries.

In this school there is also a three year course in steam and electrical engineering. The first year is given to the study of shop mathematics and physics, the second to applied physics with laboratory work and the third to practical work in the steam and electrical engineering shops. Domestic science is taught thoroughly. The dressmaking classes are among the most popular of all. Pupils are taught how to make a gown complete from drafting the pattern cutting and fitting down to the finishing of the garment.

All of the experiments made in this direction have proved to be so successful that the utility of free night instruction is no longer a matter of discussion. That the spread of the system will do more to effect social reform than all the mere theories ever expounded is equally certain.

PARKS AS BIG AS PROVINCES.

Australia's new national park which is just now in course of formation around Mount Kosciusko New South Wales will be a big thing of its kind much bigger than any they have in Britain.

One hundred square miles of land have been set aside for it. This means that it will be considerably more than a hundred times larger than Hyde park and Kensington gardens combined.

But even Kosciusko park immense as it is is a mere garden plot when compared with the Yellowstone National park which covers an area of 3,348 square miles of United States territory and embraces within its boundaries [illegible] of almost every kind of [illegible] lakes mountains boiling springs mud volcanoes [illegible] basaltic [illegible] huge boulders worn by erosion [illegible] and kind of [illegible] that the [illegible]

The Yellowstone is at present by far and away the largest park in the world. But [illegible] this respect is not likely to last long for both the German government and Britain have under consideration [illegible] forest [illegible] reservations on a similar [illegible] Central Africa.

Of these the German one is to be the biggest embracing as it does according to present arrangements 30,000 square miles of territory. In other words it will be the size of Ireland.

Within the confines of this enormous park which by the by will embrace the greater part of Lake Eyassi a comparatively small but picturesque sheet of water lying 100 miles southeast of Lake Victoria Nyanza will be preserved specimens of all the fast disappearing fauna of Africa that is not carnivorous—zebras giraffes elephants monkeys, antelopes and so forth.

FIRST CARDINAL TO PLAY GOLF.

Cardinal Merry del Val the pope's secretary of state has played a prominent role in the recent crisis of the church in France. The cardinal is said to be an indefatigable worker a frugal liver a man of strong likes and dislikes with a hot temper that is often in evidence but always under control. Tall and slim of figure graceful of motion he shows the highest type of the Andalusian in every feature. As a youth he was very fond of pranks. When the cardinal goes on his rounds he drives in a vehicle sombre and heavy drawn by two black stallions with flowing manes. He is the first cardinal to indulge in golf a game which he plays twice weekly over a private course in the grounds of the Villa Doria Pamphili. His leisure time is spent at the papal summer palace of Castel Gandolfo which the Italian government has connected with the Vatican by telephone for the greater convenience of the cardinal. He is an advocate of all modern labor saving improvements and has introduced telephones elevators electric lights and typewriters into the Vatican.

JOHN S. DUSS, HARMONIST and BANDMASTER

RECENT proceedings brought by the state of Pennsylvania to obtain possession of all the property of the Harmony society now [illegible] to revive interest in that [illegible] forgotten community which was [illegible] its apogee in the middle of the last century. Among all the strange manifestations of social and religious exclusiveness that have [illegible] time to time [illegible] in this country the story of the Harmonists called Economists from the name of their settlement is most pathetic.

For it is now at its final chapter. For more than three quarters of a century it has been unfolding step by step and now it has reached its end—the only end that has been possible under the circumstances. When the courts have fixed the ownership of the communal estate now remaining the book will be closed forever and the Harmony society will be a thing of the past.

Practically it is that now. At the present moment there are only two survivors of the curious sect. These remaining Harmonists are John S. Duss the well known bandmaster and his wife. Upon them are centered all the traditions of the extinct society and its estate has descended to them.

There is no question of descent. The state of Pennsylvania admits it. It is a matter of history and record that John S. Duss and his wife are the last representatives of the old community. The state contends that Duss and his wife have forfeited their right to the estate by following a way of living which is not in accord with the principles of the community.

The state maintains that the terms Harmony society and John S. Duss and wife are incompatible and cannot be made to agree. For the Harmonists were celibates and there was no marriage or giving in marriage at Economy. Every member of the community was bound by a vow to remain celibate for the remainder of his or her life. Celibacy was one of the most vital features of the sect. The violation of this rule would have entailed speedy expulsion. Now that there is no one left to enforce the rule the state assumes the responsibility.

John S. Duss the man who sees no cause why he should not be undisturbed in [illegible] of the riches [illegible] of the Harmonists [illegible] part. He is a born fighter [illegible] he has had [illegible] experience in [illegible] of a thing what he regards as his own. He became head of the community about twenty years ago and at once began to exhibit a remarkable executive ability. Through neglect and poor business management the society had met with reverses. Many of its industries had fallen into decay and its splendid agricultural plant had been suffered to deteriorate.

Duss—young capable and energetic—worked a remarkable change. Once more the society became prosperous and its property was restored to its original value. The membership of the community was dying out rapidly and there was no remedy for that but there was no depreciation of the estate. There had been no additions to the communistic family from the outside and there could be none in any other way. The time came when Duss was the brains and almost the absolute ruler of the entire [illegible]

Although evidently he was doing so much for the community the old Harmonists did not approve of his methods. It seemed to them that their leader was holding too much intercourse with that world from which they had withdrawn. He was musically inclined and organized a brass band and orchestra at Economy which was a source of great discomfort for his brethren. They put their venerable heads together and resolved to oust him.

They appealed to the courts but failed to secure relief. Their young leader was too well intrenched to be dislodged by their feeble efforts. The United States supreme court decided everything in his favor and he secured an apparently firm hold on all the property. He bought and sold on his own initiative and became practically the whole thing.

The career of John S. Duss abounds in incident. It is quite as interesting as is that of the curious society of which he became the head. He was the only child who ever became a part of this strange celibate family. His father and mother German immigrants, came to Economy when he was two years of age and entered the community as servants. Although it was regarded as an innovation and some of the older brethren shook their heads the parents were permitted to take the vow and the child was adopted into the society.

The presence of a child in that austere and celibate family bred a sentiment of discontent that threatened to prove disastrous. The women became his veriest slaves and the men were scarcely less abject in their servitude. The time came when Father Jacob Henrici then head of the Harmonists realized that the boy must not be permitted to remain in the community. Although he was overfond of the child he sent him to a boarding school to be educated.

When he left the school young Duss did not return to Economy. He went to Nebraska became a farmer married and prospered moderately. Twenty years after he left Economy to go to school he returned in company with a wife and several children. Father Henrici who was still the head of the greatly reduced community received him with open arms. The old man had never lost his affection for the boy who was still the adopted child of the society.

Henrici was old and feeble and the affairs of the society were in bad shape. Duss saw his opportunity and Henrici encouraged him in his desire to assume charge of the society's business. There was the obstacle of the marriage but Duss and his wife agreed to become brother and sister and took the vows to that effect. When Henrici died the few surviving members elected Duss to succeed him.

The Harmonist cult had its origin in Germany having been founded by George Rapp a native of Wurttemberg who in 1803 emigrated with a company of adherents to America and established the first colony at Zelienople. Father Rapp was a firm believer in the fact that he had been delegated to restore Christianity to its original purity and he succeeded in inspiring about a hundred followers with the same belief. For a few years the cult flourished and at one time there were about 500 disciples.

After awhile however there were no more additions. The celibate feature not proving attractive to investigators of the principles of the society. Most of those who had joined the Harmonists were middle aged or beyond at the time of their entrance so that by the time the sect removed to Economy it had been reduced to about a hundred persons. When Henrici Rapp's successor died the community owned about 500 acres of the finest farming land in Pennsylvania.

There is little doubt that if Duss had not reappeared at Economy when he did there would have been but a miserable fragment of the original Harmonist estate at the time of the society's dissolution. It is due to his energy and business ability that there is still an estate worth fighting for.

LORD KITCHENER'S SARCASM

Lord Kitchener's pitiless contempt for anything which savors of effeminacy is well illustrated in the following story. Shortly after his return from Egypt he was accosted in a friend's house by a young lord whose [illegible] impudence in soliciting celebrities' autographs is the cause of constant vexation. "Do honor me by [illegible] your name [illegible]" this Lord Kitchener [illegible] gushed [illegible] ing a very flimsy lace handkerchief and laying it on the table. "Then I'll have the autograph worked in silk and keep it [illegible] in memory of the hero of Khartoum." Kitchener picked up the scent[ed] handkerchief and sniffed it. "You [illegible] I presume," he questioned [illegible] with [illegible] "No sir [illegible] my own. A very pretty pattern isn't it?" "Very," was Kitchener's [illegible] response as he passed the [illegible] back unsigned. "What is your taste in hairpins by the way?"

WHERE WOMEN RULE

[illegible] village [illegible] there exists a religious sect whose disciples are [illegible] not only to marry but also to take a vow to submit to the wife in all things. The women choose one of their number as leader whose duty it is to see that the men behave themselves and to punish them if they transgress.

The Little Tin Bank,

By RUPERT HUGHES.

THE baby's savings bank is an excellent thing. It often saves the grown ups from serious embarrassment.

When Seth Radford, Jr., was born, Seth Radford, Sr., had opened an account for him in a small tin institution, with a paid up capital of $100 and with a guaranteed interest of 1,000 per cent. per annum. In exactly three months there befell a stringency in the Radford establishment, and while the baby was not looking the father looted the bank. All he left behind was a little note—here's the very note, this is what he wrote:

"On demand I promise to pay Seth Radford, Jr., one hundred dollars ($100) with interest at the rate of 100 per cent. a month. Value received.

Seth Radford, Sr."

It was against the law to charge such usury, and baby was beginning life like a high financier. He would certainly have been investigated and sent to the penitentiary if the transaction had been discovered by any of the magazine sleuths, and pointed out to any of the new school of district attorneys.

Two months passed and Seth, Sr., had not yet managed to repay the infant Shylock, except by occasionally slipping through the slot in the bank a casual instalment of dimes, quarters or dollar bills.

As for the baby, he was apparently indifferent to the condition of the loan market. He never balanced his books; he never counted up his petty cash. His main interest in life was a small bunch of livestock—ten pink and chubby toes. He was a miser with respect to these, and seemed always afraid that one of them would get lost. Besides, his mother was constantly looking them over, and threatening to bite them off; and she was such a greedy person that he could never be quite sure of her.

The muffled rattle of the money in his bank made poor music to Seth, Jr.'s, flower-like little ears. He much preferred the rattle of a real rattle. Today for the dozenth time, he pushed his bank contemptuously to the floor, and returned to the numbering of his toes. Seth, Sr., had already picked up the bank and restored it eleven times, but now the find of it caught his attention from a mood of deep blues that even the gurgling google of the baby had not managed to dissipate.

Fortune had been having fun with Mr. Radford. It had played seesaw with him for two years; one month he was soaring skywards, a rich youth; the next month he bumped terra firma—with the accent on the firma. Just now he was off the plank entirely, flat on the ground, bruised, aching; and the seesaw board was high out of reach.

Two years before he had suddenly realized that he was alone. He had seen his mother laid in a little grave alongside the grave of his father. The town of his birth and his youth suddenly ceased to mean home to him. He resolved to strike out into the unknown.

His assets were a little cash, a good deal of curiosity and a fairy-purse of self-renewing hope. He decided that New England was a poor place to begin small. Texas was its antipodes, young, big, not jaded. Southwest he set his course, and arrived in Galveston just as the Beaumont oil fields burst into fame with all the world amazing fury of their own gushers.

Young Radford knew less about the oil business than even the Pennsylvania experts, who came into the field with old traditions of how to handle slow streams of high-grade oil. They were like trout-fishers with tarpons on their hooks. Bankruptcies and fortunes danced before the onlooker's eyes, while whole lakes of subterrene grease exploded through long pipes, filled the air with hydro-carbonic typhoons, and settled on the ground in unctuous rivers of unholy smell.

"New England was never like this," said Radford, "but it looks interesting, as well as instructive." He hired himself out as a helper on a drilling rig to learn the trade—if trade it was to gamble with earth's "innards" in such uncertain, but epic fashion.

Promotions were rapid, for derricks were springing up as fast as hammers could wed nail and pine. Before he was aware of it, Radford, who but yesterday had not known a chain-tong from a fish-tail drill-bit, was invited to take charge of a brand new derrick. Then the number of earthward sticks began to gain on the upward glory. People came to offer him wonderful bargains which would make anybody rich without doubt, but which the present owners for various reasons of health, family, etc., could not stop to develop. But Radford was born in New England. He was not convinced.

The oil fever began to lag in Texas. Then came a great find at Batson's Prairie. There was an overnight exodus. Seth arrived among the earliest, on a cow pony after plowing through swamps at night. He decided to back his judgment. He bought a little shoestring strip of ground before the prices had jumped very far. As soon as the derrick was up, and the pipe down, he brought in a gusher so big that he could not get tanks fast enough to hold the oil. He saw liquid dollars belonging to him sliding away by the hundreds. But most of them he managed to capture.

He named the well the "Alice"—after a certain person.

The price of oil was high. The Southern Pacific was using it on the engines, and the supply was short.

Factories began to burn it instead of coal. Before Radford quite realized it, he was worth about $25,000, and more bubbling up as fast as it could climb out of the ground.

He called himself a genius. He was a Koal oil King with two K's. He wondered what he should present to his native town—a library?—a manual training school? or a park? He wrote to Alice to ask her advice. She was a Galveston girl. The first one he had met after he struck Texas. One was enough. It had taken a single look from her deep, dark Texan eyes and two words in her mellow Southern speech to paralyze all his powers of resistance.

His heart looked no farther. It said "J'y suis; j'y reste."

He had not known her long when he came to agree with her opinion that, in the Civil War, the North had seceded from the South and from all decency, and had somehow, after a series of ignoble defeats, emerged victorious only because the Southern generals were too gentlemanly to fight any longer with nigger-stealers.

Before he had left Galveston, he had partly persuaded Alice to forgive him for being born in the odious North. At Beaumont he had dreamed of her, of her Southern graces, her Southern subtleties of tact and beauty. Her every mannerism was an angel's trait. He endured the mud, the grease, the fatigue, the fever, because he hoped it would some day bring him the wealth that she ought to have.

And now he had $25,000 of his own and more pouring in. He wrote her and said.

"My Darling:

I can't live without you any longer. Can you love me? Will you marry me?

Seth."

He haunted the post-office shack for her answer. But it came by wire. Just a "Yes, yes, yes."—only three words, and all the other seven left unsaid! But he forgave the extravagance—being rich. As he turned to go back to his tent, he walked so large that he touched only the high spots. He looked at the sky. A moment before it had been lit with stars; now they were all white magnolia blossoms filling the wind with a scented whisper of "Yes, yes, yes."

They took their honeymoon in New York at the Waldorf-Astoria. There was something appallingly blissful about the bills. When Alice was afraid to buy something gorgeous, Seth would say:

"Listen, honey; can you hear the gluggle-gluggle-gluggle?—that's the oil coming out of the ground—every four gluggles means a dollar. Don't be afraid."

They decided to run across to Europe. Seth said that his right hand man, Tom Dominick, would take care of everything. He bought a stateroom on a steamer sailing the next day. Just as they were leaving their suite at the hotel, a page brought Seth a telegram:

"The oil has quit gushing: got to get air compressors.

Tom."

"I ought to be on the spot," groaned Seth. "Would it break your heart, dearie, to give up the Europe idea for a while? Or could you take your mother and let me come over later, when I can?"

"Do you reckon I ma'ied you to get rid of you?" said Alice.

A week later the newspaper at Batson's Prairie announced in its society column:

"The popular oil-producer, Mr. Seth Radford, and his charming bride, nee Miss Alice Payton, of Galveston, have returned from New York, and will make their sojourn among our elite. Welcome to Batsons' Prairie, Seth!"

Now, gushers are free and vivacious. Pumping machinery costs money and brings less oil. The pumps worked harder and harder, but the flow grew slower—slower—slower; and the price of oil went down—down—down. The outfits of the Radfords followed the price.

"I don't exactly admiah the oil business," said Alice.

Gradually Batsons' Prairie lost prestige. Seth bought more ground and dug more wells. Sometimes he struck a pocket of oil that only flattery could call a gusher. He was glad if it managed to pay its own cost before it petered out. Sometimes, after weary work and the encountering of good omen after good omen till hope grew frantic, there came a time when it was plainly useless to drill further—and several thousands of dollars had gone, with nothing to show but an empty hole twelve hundred feet deep.

"I'm afraid I brought you bad luck, honey," said Alice.

"You are good luck enough just by yourself," Seth would answer, with all the cheer he could muster.

After a year they were nearly bankrupt and the majority of people had left Batsons' Prairie, some with full purses, some with flat. In time, Seth realized that there was nothing to do but shut down the lazy wells, paint the machinery to prevent rust—and wait for a new field.

Waiting is hard work, and Seth had been schooled to excitement. Then for a while there came enough of that. Two lives were in danger: one dearer than his own life, one that was to be dearer.

Fortune favored them with a smile, and, according to the newspapers, "Mother and child were doing as well as could be expected." "Child" weighed ten pounds, and yelled like a Piute; and they named him after his daddy.

The amateur father and mother used to sit talking of the prospects of their youngster. There was little else to do.

"The boy ought to have a bank," said Seth.

They felt that they could hardly begin it with less than a hundred dollars. They used to sit and figure out how much that would amount to at compound interest by the time the child was old enough to vote. Alice made it something like three million dollars but Seth said she was "careless with her noughts." Still, even as corrected, the sum was very handsome, and they thought of it whenever they dropped a dime or a nickel into the little tin bank. It was a pleasanter thing to think of than the sum in their own bank, for that dwindled daily. Often, when Seth was famished for a cigar, he pushed the money through the little tin slot, and smoked the aromatic weed of hope.

But the baby was not many months old when the oil field at Humble broke out. Seth rushed to the scene and spent almost his last cent in land. He established Mrs. and Master Radford at a hotel in Houston, and joined the group of young men who took the early morning train every day to Humble and returned at night, dirty, dishevelled and tired, then washed up, dressed up and marched into the dining-room like gentlemen and gilded youth, with their handsome wives.

Five big wells came in while Seth was drilling. The sixth was his, and a gusher. He put a large bill in the baby's bank.

In three days the well flowed hot salt water. No power could save it. It was like finding a roll of thousand-dollar bills and afterward discovering that they are all counterfeit. Seth's next well escaped and flowed proper oil enough to put him in funds for a while. The third began as a millionaire-maker and then dissolved into tears.

"Saline injection will save a dying man's life," said Seth, "but it's sure death to an oil man."

The year had reached its "embers." Christmas was nearing. Seth had hoped to spend it in the North, and he had told Alice a lot about sleigh-riding. She had never seen even a sled.

But their plans were now mainly conversation, for it was growing hard even to borrow money. Some distant relatives of Seth's who had heard of him when he was at the Waldorf rediscovered his existence and invited him and his family to "house party." It meant three, besides railroad fare. Seth declined glumly.

"We shall have each other, honey," smiled Alice.

"But we shan't have snow," groaned the Northerner. "I'm sick of roses. They don't belong on the porch at Chrisimas. I want a white Christmas. I'd give a million dollars to hear sleigh bells."

The next well was plainly to be his last. He gave up Humble and went to a new field, at Slover's X-Roads, where salt water had not broken in to corrupt the few wells that had been found. He exhausted every resource for funds. The bankers, when he called, regretfully referred him to a little stack of notes unpaid. Most of his friends were as near gone as himself. He wheedled out of them small sum after small sum. He began to pawn, but soon ran out of pawnables. He owed his crew two weeks' wages, and it was increasingly embarrassing for him to go near the derrick; especially as the drill had struck a stratum of hard gypsum. Sometimes they could only make two or three inches a day. The slowness of the work got on the nerves of the men. It made them thirsty, and it made them surly to have to borrow the price of a drink from another rig, when wages were owing to them.

Alice had refused to stay at the hotel in Houston any longer and run up bills. After a bitter quarrel in which altruism clashed with altruism, she forced Seth to allow her to come out to the field town and take a room in a pine-shack, which even the tame title of boarding-house seemed to overhonor. The landlady was Mrs. Bunnell. Her sister Jane was the belle of the field—which was not saying much.

And so December reached its twenty-fourth—a warm and sultry day in which everything seemed as far as possible from the normal Christmas conditions. Late one afternoon Seth came in and threw himself on a chair in abject collapse.

"The rotary table has just snapped in two. I can't raise money for another. The work has shut down. The men are grouchy, and I'm all in," he explained.

"The men haven't struck, have they?" Alice asked.

"Oh, they're as faithful and patient as you'd expect angels to be," said Seth, "and they promised not to knock off till the last hope was gone, but this has finished them."

"They mustn't stop yet," said Alice. "You just stay heah and tend the baby awhile."

"I guess that's about all I'm good for," Seth groaned, too deeply dejected to note that she had slipped on her hat and hurried out.

He sat chewing the bitter cud of baffled hopes, and mechanically picking up the toys as the baby threw them overboard. It was then, that, after the eleventh consecutive restoration of the little tin bank, the clink of the money shocked his ear and opened his mind to temptation.

He put it away, and vowed to die first. But the bank fascinated him, and as the baby continued to toss over his toes, Seth, Sr., found himself half-unconsciously working at the lock, when Alice burst in.

"The men have promised they'll stay on," she said. "Tom Dominick said he'd work till somewhere or other froze ova, if I asked him tew. So I asked him. All he needed he said was money enough to get a new rotary something or other. Do you reckon we could scrape up a few dollars some place?"

At that moment the little tin bank came suddenly open in Seth's hand, and there was a local cloudburst of pennies, dimes, quarters, bills, and gold pieces.

Alice's eyes widened with joy. She credited the baby with the whole idea, and was on her knees threatening to nip off all the pink toes at once.

"I'd rather die than rob the baby's bank," said Seth.

"Well, thank goodness, I haven't such principles," cried Alice. "I'll be the burglar. Besides, he's very anxious for us to use it, aren't you, you b'ssed, itty, wootsum-tootsum," etc.

HE COVERED HIS NOSE WITH HIS HANDKERCHIEF, AND RAN.

When she jabbed her forehead in Seth, Jr.'s, ticklish ribs and burrowed, the baby emitted joyous noises that might have been taken for approval. They sufficed the easy conscience of Alice, and she hobbled about on her knees harvesting the shekels. She forced them into Seth's pocket, got his hat, slammed it on his head, kissed him and shoved him out of the door.

He went with bowed head to the derrick, gave Tom money enough to pay for the repairs, and a little extra to buy cigars and drinks.

When Tom returned with a new rotary and a resharpened bit, he ordered Seth off the premises.

"You go way fom heah, Mista Radford," he commanded. "You are daid beat. You need sleep."

Seth yielded, and went back to Alice. He could still hear the mumble of the revolving drill when he fell asleep at midnight, worn out with despondency. He slept like a dead man, for hours.

Suddenly he sat up aghast. Had a wild-cat leaped at his throat and screamed in his very ear? He rubbed his eyes, and looked about. The scream continued. It was like the death-cry of a thousand panthers. The very physical impact of it was a terrific pain.

He leaped from his bed. Day was just breaking, and in the rosy twilight of dawn he could see Alice staring at him and hugging the baby to her breast. From her look he could tell that she was calling to him. From the baby's distorted scarlet features he could see that Seth, Jr., was howling with all the horse power of his lungs. But not a sound could be heard except that fearful shriek.

He went close to Alice and yelled at her, but she shook her head; she could not hear a syllable. Her features were wrung with the torture of the noise. He motioned her to cover her head with the bed covers. Then he slipped into a few clothes, and hurried out, clasping his hands about his ears as if to keep his skull from being split with the clamor.

He saw his crew running away from his well. The long steel cable had been sent flying like a twine string; two joints of pipe had been hurled against a tree and wrapped around it. The derrick was almost hidden in a white haze; a geyser of fine sand was streaming upward and eating away the lofty crown-block.

Seth knew what it was. He found Tom, and they gesticulated at each other; they made faces, but no audible sound. Their voices were vain as candles in the full sunlight. Each was trying to yell the same thing.

"She's a gasser, blowing her head off."

They were soaked, drowned, obliterated in a sea of intolerable noise.

A mile away at the railroad station the passengers were equally made dumb by the uproar. If a man wanted a ticket, he had to write out the name of the station. An engine rolled in with a bell that rocked without sound and a whistle emitting puffs of white steam that no one heard.

The animals of the region were greatly disturbed. There was much breaking of harness on the part of horses, and one or two galloped about under empty saddles; their riders were doubtless stuck in the mud somewhere, head first. A few pigs, wandering here and there, had sniffed at the noise and returned to their luxurious wallows in the oily muck.

Suddenly Tom clutched Seth and pointed. He saw one of the pigs struggle and pant, then fall over. Others did the same. A frightened hound came scurrying about for its master, stopped short, shivered, fought for breath, dropped dead. Chickens flopped on their backs as if bowled over by unheard shot.

Seth thought of his family. A sluggish river of fatal gas was flowing toward the boarding-house. He covered his nose with his handkerchief and ran. It was of no use to yell alarms or pound on doors—nothing could be heard.

When he dashed into his own room, he found Alice huddled under the bed clothes, wrapping the pillow about her ears and the baby's. She did not hear Seth enter. She could not understand his wild motions. He caught her up in his arms and ran with her.

Tom had followed Seth into the house and now followed him out, dragging the landlady and her daughter, each by an arm. Mrs. Bunnell, at that hour, was not ready to receive, and she was scratching Tom with might and main. Sister Jane chiefly regretted her curl papers; she was whacking Tom with a wire hairbrush.

But the three women were like the Sabines in the arms of the Romans; their resistance was unavailing till Seth and Tom had gained a safe distance to the windward. There the women could look back and see the chickens, the pigs and the dogs lying asphyxiated by the invisible death that flowed stealthily north, instantly paralyzing any living thing that breathed of it deeply. Here and there were men smitten blind from a few inhalations of the gas. They held their foreheads in their hands, and rocked with anguish, knowing that they must suffer for days before sight or comfort would return.

The ear-sawing noise continued and effort at speech was resigned. But the appearance of the women was eloquent to the eye, and they were soon invited to other shacks for proper clothing.

When there were no more lives to save, Seth and Tom took counsel in such sign language as they could improvise.

The crew knew their business and hurried to the nearest general store, where they got wads of cotton which they packed into their ears. Then they went plowing through the greasy mud till they found a patch of blue clay. They dug their hands into it and slapped it over their ears by the fistful. When they were masked, all but the eyes, nose and mouth, they followed Seth's lead, and keeping to the windward of the deadly breeze, made a rush for the derrick.

The gas blast that ate away the collar on the joints of pipe and the case-hardened rings of the new rotary table, spared the softer tissues of their faces and hands, but the scream of the giant gas whistle slashed through their heads with the agony of countless knives.

Orders were given by seizing a man and pointing. The crew worked like mad, sweating with the torment of the din. Everything was bungled in the haste and had to be done twice; but, in time, with ropes and tackle, a nipple and an open gate-valve, and a joint of pipe made up tight into one piece, were swung from the torn and shattered derrick. Failure followed failure before it was firmly screwed into the well casing. Then pipe was taken at random without reward to ownership, and made into a line a few hundred feet long, at the end of which the gas was set on fire. The titanic shriek stopped as if Niagara were suddenly turned to stone. There was only the dull roar of a great flame twisting and winding in unearthly beauty.

"There's oil in that gas strata, notice them red streaks in that blue flame?" said Tom.

Seth looked at it, with tears rolling down his set face.

"We've got to kill that gas first," said Seth. "I wish we had Decker's hydraulic pump, 'old Betsy.' I loaned him a boiler once; his fireman was too fond of dime libraries and he let the crown sheets blow out. I never got paid for it, either. We'll just go and take it. Garraxan has the mules and wagon and he is in Houston to-day celebrating Christmas, but his siable niggers will die for me. We ought to have nine sticks of 60 per cent. dynamite down in that hole before night."

Tom was off without thought of sleep or stomach. He was thinking, "I wonda what old Mista Nap'leon would do in a Texas oil field."

The other men took off their clay masks, pulled the waste from their aching ears, ate ravenously, drank like men half-dead of thirst, then set to work making the necessary foundation and steam connections for "Decker's Old Betsy."

Before these were ready, the sun was down, but by the light of the huge gas flare, six jack-rabbit mules came dragging a wide-wheeled wagon. In the middle, heavily chained to the bed, was "Old Betsy." With rollers, skids and crow-bars she was coaxed into place on the hastily made foundation. The wheel of the gate-valve was screwed tight, and the light from the great torch went out. There was only a little glimmer from a new moon. When "Betsy" was ready, steam was turned on, and then the battle began.

"Fourteen inches of steam behind a five-inch piston, it ought to go against that gas," said Tom, "she'll do six hundred pounds, I've seen her."

But if "Betsy's" credit was good for six hundred she failed to show it. She filled her suction pipe, made half a dozen quick strokes, and stood quivering with effort, steam jetting from the safety valve.

"Look out," said Tom. "There's gas coming up on the outside of the casing; there'll be hell popping heah in a minute."

The men scattered; the derrick foundation trembled. There was a gurgle and splash below the derrick floor.

But Seth would not budge at such a crisis. He remained alone in the trembling derrick.

"Hang a pair of chain tongs on that safety valve!" he shouted. Then he opened the steam valve wide and stepped outside the derrick. The faithful "Old Betsy" slowly picked up her natural gait and doggedly forced the gas back down the pipe under the pressure of steam and muddy water, until Seth had his wild well under control.

Meanwhile some of the men had got the wire, others the dynamite, another the plunger magneto.

A long heavy piece of cast iron was attached below the dynamite as a sinker. Then the condensed annihilation was lowered carefully into the well, with the tenderness that would be shown a sick baby.

"She's on bottom," said Seth, unmindful of the hazards as he pulled the wire up and down.

"Stand away, Tom; I'll handle that magneto."

Seth would never let his men take a risk that he could take himself.

"Here goes my best hope in this oil field. It makes me or breaks me," he said as he attached the two black and greasy wires to the magneto.

And then he took the lever with both hands, and gave it a quick plunge.

Far down below there was a muffled thud, there was a quiver of the ground, an anxious silence that imperceptibly crescendoed into a mutter, a gurgle, a growl, a roar, a god-like whoop—and a vast tower of black oil was shooting aloft and splashing back with a sound that was angelic symphony to the oil men's very souls.

It was nearly midnight when Seth appeared again at the boarding house, which a rising wind had swept clear of the fumes. He washed up, as well as he could, in the moonlight at the tin basin on the soap box outside, but he was still somewhat the worse for fatigue and his anointment was overdone. But Alice gathered him close and kissed him more than once.

Even the baby had felt it unfit to sleep at such a crisis in their three lives. He sat up on the bed and earnestly hunted for his numerous toes in a shaft of moonlight.

Seth was so excited that he began at once to gabble business.

"We estimate the well at 15,000 barrels a day. Old Hazelton came round an hour ago and offered me $25,000 cash as she flows. But I told him that with oil at the present price, I'd clean up that much in a few days, so I declined. You see, 15,000 barrels of oil at 38 cents a barrel makes——"

"You can tell me that tomorra, honey," said Alice, stopping his lips with a kiss. "Aren't you glad I robbed the bank?"

"Yes, I thought of that," said Seth, sheepishly. "I'm kind of ashamed and kind of proud. I guess it will be square if we refund what we borrowed with 100 per cent. for the loan. A newspaper reporter asked me what the name of this well would be, and I told him 'The Little Tin Bank.' He said, 'Why?' and I said, 'Because.'"

"And that's reason enough," said Alice. "But we owe it all to the baby." Then Seth, Sr., and Mrs. Seth, Sr., knelt down by the bed and seized Seth, Jr. They kissed him and nuzzled him so that he lost count of his toes and had to begin all over again.

NEW COMPANY IN THE FIELD

Sandy Hook Mining Company Will Work Gunnison County Mines.

Some Good Ore.

PITKIN, Colo., April 13.—The company known as the Sandy Hook Mining company was incorporated last week in Denver by W. H. Martin of Quincy, Mich.; W. S. Henderson and J. H. Wagner of Pitkin, and capitalized for $1,000,000. This company has secured a valuable group of claims on Ohio creek, lying between the Denver City and the Chronicle, the latter being an old and heavy producer, and contemplate doing a large amount of work this coming summer. There can be no mistake in running a long tunnel either way from Ohio creek, as the values exist at great depth, and great depth can be attained in either direction. That the new company will meet with success is almost an assured thing.

The Silver King mine is looking more promising each day and has the marks of a first-class mine. The operators are in 115 feet on a vein which is now two feet wide and averages $80 per ton in gold, silver, lead, zinc and copper. Three carloads of this ore is on the dump, which will be shipped as soon as they can get cars.

This property is located near Sherrod. A general revival is expected throughout the whole Sherrod district this year.

It is understood that an electric power and light plant will surely be erected on Quartz creek near Ohio City this coming summer, which will be large enough to furnish light and power for the whole district. This will make two plants of the kind on Quartz, as Mr. Brant declares that he is going to construct his just below Pitkin and will have it running by the first of October or before.

Why Loan Your Money at 6% on Real Estate When You Can Get 7% by Investing in Bonds Secured by First Mortgage on Real Estate?

The San Luis Valley Irrigation, Land and Power Company is giving as a bonus with each $500 bond, 1,200 shares of the capital stock of the company and selling the bond for 85c on the dollar. This means that for $425 you can get a $500 bond and 1,200 shares of stock.

This company is building a large reservoir in the San Luis Valley in the state of Colorado; and this reservoir will be sufficient to irrigate about 30,000 acres of land.

Owns about 3,200 acres of land at $30 an acre	$95,000
Water to be sold for 30,000 acres of land at $25	750,000
Resources	$845,000
The property is mortgaged for	300,000
Balance	$545,000

The company is capitalized for 1,000,000 shares and, figuring the net assets as above, this makes each share of stock worth 54c, or, the stock and bond that can now be bought for $425 should be worth as follows:

1,200 shares stock at 54c	648
Total	$1,148

The company has expended about $190,000 in the construction of this reservoir, and the bonds have been subscribed by persons familiar with this proposition, and includes some of the best financial people in the city.

The company is giving the bondholders ⅗ of the capital stock of the company as a bonus, and, therefore, the bondholders control the company as well as hold a first mortgage on the property. For full particulars, call on

$80 ORE IS SECURED

WILD HORSE PROPERTY PRODUCING WELL.

Mill Now Paying Proposition—W P H Plant Being Equipped—Forest Queen Strike Denied.

Special to The Gazette

CRIPPLE CREEK April 13—Fogeman and Gregory, who are operating a lease between the 200 and the 400 foot levels of the Wild Horse on Bull hill through the old main working, are getting out some exceptionally rice ore. Returns have been received on a carload shipment which went four ounces or $80 in gold to the ton. Two more cars are now at the sampler and the lessees are of the opinion that the two cars on which returns have not been received will go as well as the one last reported. The lessees are breaking the ore about three feet wide. There is a narrow streak in the vein matter that runs very high.

There are several other sets of lessees operating on the Wild Horse which is owned by the United Gold Mines company and each set is doing nicely and all are shipping some ore. The Wild Horse mill under the management of Kavanagh and company, is perhaps the most prolific money maker on this property. The plant is treating about fifty tons of ore every day and the average value is about $8, which allows of a handsome profit. Mr Kavanagh is a California cyanide expert and he has made the Wild Horse mill a paying proposition from the time he began work about a year ago, which is the first time since the mill was erected that it has proven a success.

Unless some accident befalls the cyanide mill now in course of construction by the W P H Leasing company on part of the W P H claim Teutonic and Jerry Johnson [illegible] will be handling 100 tons daily by June 1. This will be the most rapid work in this line ever made in the camp. Work was started by excavating on February 22. The tank room 5 x86 feet the sampling room [illegible]x44 feet, the roll and bin room [illegible] feet and the crusher room 16x32 feet are now all completed and part of the machinery is now being installed. Frank Groch, a Black hills expert and A. B Whitmore of the W P H company are in charge and it is largely due to their untiring efforts that such good work has been accomplished. Crosscutting at 300 feet in Jerry Johnson is in progress. The north drift has been extended 469 feet and the south one [illegible] feet. Crosscutting is being done to cut the ore body in Teutonic that has been found in the W. P. H.

The reported strike in the Forest Queen on Ironclad hill is denied by General Manager O D Fogleman. Mr Fogleman said today that he was now driving a crosscut on the bottom level at a depth of [illegible] feet to get under the ore body opened approximately 100 feet above. This crosscut has now been driven east and north for a distance of [illegible] feet and there is still about 100 feet more driving to be done before the shoot should be struck. The Forest Queen is shipping from two to three cars of ore a week and the average value is from $[illegible] to $[illegible] in gold to the ton. As soon as the development work is finished on the bottom level and the ore is encountered the tonnage from the Forest Queen will be about one car a day.

Wellington and company leasing on block 20 which covers a portion of the Lucky Guss and the Specimen claims of the Stratton estate on Bull hill, are shipping ore regularly which will give returns of about $30 in gold to the ton. The ore body is from three to five feet wide and is found at a depth of 200 feet. This is said to be one of the best small leases now under operation which belongs to the estate.

[illegible] and company operating on the Deerhorn claim on Globe hill are breaking some ore and making regular shipment from a three foot vein found at a depth of 200 feet. The company is getting out two and three cars of ore a week. The coarse rock is giving returns of about $[illegible] while the screenings will run two ounces and better. This lease has been one of the very best in the camp but at the present time the tonnage is considerably smaller than usual. The lessees are now doing quite a bit of development work, which accounts in a large measure for the shortage in tonnage. It is expected that within 60 days the normal output will be [illegible].

VEIN CUT AT 80 FEET

ORE IS ENCOUNTERED SOONER THAN EXPECTED.

Steamboat Springs Company Makes Good Find—Development Will Be Extended.

STEAMBOAT SPRINGS Colo April 13 The Copper Ridge Mining and Milling company which owns the Republican and Democrat claims on Copper ridge three and a half miles north of Steamboat Springs, has been sinking a shaft on the Republican with the intention of cutting the vein at a depth of about [illegible] feet. The vein however was cut at about [illegible] feet where it showed about two and a half feet of highly mineralized quartz. On making [illegible] the vein [illegible] enough to pass out of the [illegible] gained [illegible] feet [illegible] average of the ore sampled [illegible] gave assays of $[illegible] gold $1.60 [illegible] silver and [illegible] per cent copper. Other assays show $[illegible] gold and [illegible] per cent copper.

At present there [illegible] run [illegible] the owners intending to ship to Denver or Leadville as soon as the [illegible] will [illegible] three to five [illegible] to [illegible] will stand the heavy transportation charges.

The vein [illegible] feet between walls which [illegible] schist. It [illegible] fissure [illegible] walls still [illegible] was sunk [illegible] A 50 foot [illegible] to cut to the vein where they found the vein about ten [illegible] from the [illegible] on top of [illegible] showed [illegible] At the [illegible] bottom of the [illegible] and a showing [illegible] the vein [illegible] out [illegible] shaft the ore showing [illegible] evidence.

A F [illegible] expert from Cripple Creek [illegible] to look over the field claims that the vein [illegible] a fissure vein as he ever saw with every indication of its being [illegible]. They are going to continue sinking on the vein unless water interferes and if water gets too bad they will drift both ways on the vein [illegible] ore [illegible] all the ore preparatory to shipment as soon as the roads are in condition for hauling.

Since the cutting of the vein in the Republican the [illegible] are full of prospectors and tenderfeet with backloads of [illegible]. Two or three new companies have been organized for the development of claims adjoining the Republican. There is a large scope of country which is mineralized and the coming season promises to be one of unprecedented activity.

Old miners from Butte, Montana claim that they never saw anything in the Butte country more attractive than the showing found in the Republican mine considering the amount of work done and predict great [illegible] upon further development. Outside of the work on the Republican there has been no work done on the hill except assessment holes but at present there are a number of parties at work and more are getting ready.

With the Republican and other claims working three and a half miles north of town and Mr Kinman and associates working their group of claims two miles [illegible] of here developing their group of claims Steamboat Springs may be a booming city in the next few years.

The old prospector will find in the vicinity indications and assays to satisfy himself that gold and copper exist. Silver values are low. The country rocks are schist, gneiss, porphyry and hornblende schist. At the foot of the hill are a number of springs, almost encircling the base which are supposed to come out of the many quartz and spar leads crossing the hill.

But then it is in Boulder county and [illegible] still [illegible] Jimtown and the wise men of London and New York shake their heads when we mention the fact because they know that there is nothing but little [illegible] of good ore in Jimtown mines, and you can't save the values for it was tried many times [illegible] years. Even now the Wano mill is losing [illegible] per cent of the values.

HUGE LOAN EXPANSION

BANK STATEMENT SHOWS UNUSUAL CONDITIONS.

Decline in Prices on Stock Market Is Severe—Closing Tone Is Unsettled and Weak

NEW YORK April 13—The bank statement reported today showed a large expansion in the loan account [illegible] has ever before [illegible] for any week in the history of the New York Clearing house. Growing misgivings over the adequacy of the [illegible] resources which have recently [illegible] money market to meet [illegible] demands for credits and which have been proved in the stock market this week became acute and [illegible] with [illegible] haste.

[illegible] activity of [illegible] new [illegible] liquidation of some importance was going on. The huge loan expansion was accepted as a demonstration of the dimensions of [illegible] which stand [illegible] The week's loan increase [illegible] $34,444,000 for the week ending [illegible] when great syndicate borrowing [illegible] influences in the money market.

An analysis of the statement of the [illegible] bank returns in this week's statement reveals that five of the large banks have increased loans in the aggregate upwards of twenty three million dollars and the well known financial returns of some of these banks [illegible] that the payment of twenty four million of subscriptions to Great Northern preferred [illegible] this portion of [illegible] Bankers report [illegible] the fall in interest rates [illegible] recalling credits [illegible] which the [illegible] banks are called upon to make up. The $7,649,000 [illegible] was largely in ex[illegible] and modified the effect [illegible] upon the reserve requirements and upon the surplus.

The severity of the decline in prices gave rise to some revived rumors of necessitous liquidation in consequence of damage inflicted by the panic break in the market. The Pacifics, Reading and Copper were the greatest sufferers in the decline and showed extreme declines of 3 to 5 points.

The closing tone was unsettled and weak in spite of some rallies on covering by shorts.

Bonds also were weak. Total sales par value $1,034,000

WHEAT MARKET STRONG

Corn Market Is Steady Throughout the Day—Oats Market Is Strong Provisions Are Steady.

CHICAGO April 13—The reports of damage by freezing temperature in the southwest came thick and fast as soon as the market opened. Prices quickly rose half a cent and only the fear of [illegible] lines of wheat over Sunday prevented the market from closing higher than it actually did. Large traders were adverse to holding wheat, because of the uncertain weather condition and after wheat had materially advanced so as to afford profit taking. In addition to damage reports was the fear the snow in the northwest will prevent seeding operations and this also added strength to the market. Statisticians were inclined to favor the bull but traders in general paid little attention to these and guided themselves entirely by the crop reports. The close was strong. May wheat opened 1-4 to [illegible] higher at 79 1-4 to [illegible] sold between [illegible] and 79 5 8 and closed at [illegible].

The corn market was steady throughout the day. Cables were reported as [illegible] 1-4 higher and the strength of wheat and oats was a factor for higher prices. The opening was strong because of these influences but later realizing sales and the indisposition of traders to carry lines over Sunday brought about a decline which wiped [illegible] of the early advances out. It was reported that primary receipts are commencing to fall off and that they were today below the shipments.

May corn opened [illegible] higher at 48[illegible] sold between 4[illegible] and 48 1 8 and closed firm and unchanged to 1 8 higher at [illegible] 3 4.

Local receipts were [illegible] cars with two of contract grade.

The oats market opened strong because of damage reports and statements that in various places fields are being plowed up to replace the seed first sown with corn. The trade was chiefly in July and September. May oats opened 1-4 to 1 [illegible] higher at 44 [illegible] sold between 43 3 4 and 44 [illegible] and closed at 44.
